comprising every species of soil and climate that is to be found upon the globe, in the hands of men able and willing to turn their advantages to the best account,—the latter are limited in every respect. It is true that our colonial shores abound with an inexhaustible supply of wealth, the possession of which becomes every day of more importance to the inhabitants of the United States; and which, as there is more than we can possibly make use of, it would be but generous in us to allow our neighbours to participate in. Now, although a commercial Republic is, perhaps, from its very nature, the last among governments from which to look for generous sentiments or actions consequent thereupon, yet, we may, from the same causes, confidently expect a just and due regard for the principles of justice; and, consequently, consider ourselves safe from any aggression or violation of the treaty, on the part of the United States. Like Holland, in her day of pride; like England, till within a few years, the policy of America, like that of all commercial nations, has been of an exclusive, in other words, of a selfish character, willing to take every advantage and but to concede as few as possible It remains to be seen whether the same principles of free trade, which have gained ground in the first commercial nation in Europe, will not be deemed equally applicable to its descendants in America. And of this, we have no doubt, time only is required for their full developement. In the mean time, this friendly visit of Commodore Shubrick will be, we are convinced, of the utmost importance toward forwarding a system of mutual and reciprocal relations between the United States and ourselves. He and those with him, will have the best opportunities of judging how much it will be for the interest of the Republic, under whose flag they serve, to open a free and unrestricted commerce with a growing people, who have nothing to offer but articles in the rudest state of preparation in exchange for those necessaries or luxuries of life, to foster and encourage the fabrication and manufactures of which is so great an object with the States. These are questions which cannot be discussed too often, or too thoroughly for it will in the end be found that, one by one, objections, hitherto deemed insuperable, will be surmounted, and obstacles which have been standing in the path of free trade will be removed, with an ease which will astonish those under whose auspices the removal hall take place.

The Editor of the Royal Gazette has courteously called our attention to the circumstance of there being a President of the Council, in Canada. We are well aware of the fact. Will he add to the kindness, by shewing who are the respective Presidents of the Executive Councils of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and whether they assume the title of P. C. in official documents or otherwise? This would be much more germain to the matter.

One moment's reflection might have served to convince the Editor of the Advertiser, that the Consular Agent of the United States would not willingly have made his appearance at a public festival in any thing like undress; and a very moderate knowledge of the usuages of genteel society would have informed him that Mr. Palmer's apologies for his seeming carelessness had been duly made, and graciously accepted, by those who were most concerned in the matter. The truth is, that Mr. Palmer had been the whole morning so occupied in paying attention to the principal guests of the day that he had no time to devote to the toilet.
