

TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

Thrilling Adventure with a Mad Dog.

A serious and nearly fatal accident occurred to Capt. McLeod and Capt. Quint on Tuesday evening last about 7 o'clock, enroute from Port Elgin to Southampton, and nearly half way home they were startled by a few short grunts on the roadside directly opposite their horse which at the same time became frightened and ran away followed by a huge dog...

LOCKWOOD.

The voting on the by-law for the erection of a fire hall for the village will take place on the 17th of June.

THERE'S MILLIONS IN IT.—Wm. McLean bought in this section on Saturday about 85 head of cattle for which he paid the sum of $8,020, an average of $107 per head. Who says cattle don't pay!

MORE GOOD CATTLE.—Jared Dryden, of the 1st con. of Huron township, delivered in this village on Friday last to Mr. Mooney four steers for shipment, for which he realized the handsome sum of $407.50.

PERSONAL.—Dr. Hutchison, who has practiced his profession in this village and vicinity for some time past, has gone to Bright to reside. The Doctor during his residence here made many friends and his departure is generally regretted. Bright is to be congratulated on securing two of our most popular citizens in the persons of the Doctor and Mr. Charles Bathford both of whom we wish every success.

A MAMMOTH OX.—The largest ox ever seen these parts, and without his equal in height can be found in the Dominion, was delivered to James McLean, cattle dealer, on Tuesday morning last, for shipment to the Old Country. Although not in very good condition he weighed 2,170 pounds and stands eight-hand high. While here the animal was viewed by hundreds, and all agree in pronouncing him the largest they had ever seen.—[Sentinel.]

Literary Notices.

Canadian Methodist Magazine for June, 1884.—Price $1 a year for six months; 25 cents per number. For sale at all book stores.

This number fittingly celebrates the hundredth year of the settlement of Upper Canada, by a number of patriotic and U. E. Loyalist poems and prose articles. John Cameron, Esq., editor-in-chief of the Toronto Globe, contributes a graceful sketch of Travel in Switzerland, "Up the Rhine." A companion piece from the same skillful pen, "Up Vesuvius" illustrated, will shortly appear. A striking article, by Dr. Dorchester, shows by the aid of six engraved diagrams the remarkable progress of Methodism and of Missions during the last century; Dr. Stewart writes on the Obligation of the Great Commission; and Helen Campbell tells the touching story of Jack "the jail bird." There are also finely illustrated articles on English Cathedrals, and on Lady Brassy's yacht voyage around the world.

The new volume, beginning with July, will have copious illustrations of "Holy Russia," "Walks about London," "In Bible Lands," "Venice," "Japan," "Around the World in 80 Days," "The State," with articles by Froude, Gladstone, President Nelles, Principal Grant, Judge Jones, Dr. Carnan, Dr. Sutherland, Prof. Foster, M.P., Prof. Shaw, John Reade, Esq., John Cameron, Esq., and many others. Now is a good time to subscribe. $1 for six months.

A TALK WITH JEFF DAVIS.

Opinion About Grant, Sherman and Lee.

Mr. William L. Taylor, of the law firm of Peck, Taylor, resumed yesterday from New Orleans. While on the trip he visited Jefferson Davis at his home, near Beauvoir, and Nashville Railroad, midway between Mobile and New Orleans. Mr. Taylor describes the home of the Confederate leader as a typical old-time plantation mansion, one story in height, with spacious halls and an imposing portico. The house lies in view of the Gulf, and is surrounded by a thick grove of orange and magnolia trees. Mr. Taylor says he was received cordially by Mr. Davis, and after they had been talking a few moments, Mrs. Jeff Davis and her daughter, a handsome young lady, appeared in the room, accompanied by a young Chicago lawyer. Mr. Davis insisted that he should remain in the house over night. During the evening the conversation turned upon the war, and Mr. Davis talked freely on all subjects that were brought up.

What is the Southern estimate of the Federal Generals? inquired Mr. Taylor. "I cannot give you the Southern estimate," Mr. Davis replied. "I can give you my own estimate. I can give you what you think of Grant?" was asked. "Grant," he said, "was largely a creature of circumstances. I remember that the first time I met Grant was when he was stationed on the Pacific Coast as a Lieutenant. I was then Secretary of War. He was charged with drunkenness and neglect of duty. I gave him his choice between standing trial and resigning. He resigned. I knew he would. General Grant was a great military commander. He was very tenacious. He fought a battle as a matter of business. Men were men, cows in the wheel. All the men and means he wanted were placed at his command, and he had every advantage. He would have been discharged from the Army of Potomac if it had not been that too many changes had already taken place in the army.

What is your estimate of Gen. Sherman? Mr. Davis said, "was looked upon in the South as Alaric was by the Romans. He was their 'cougee of God.' He was cruel, yet he was a great strategist." "You interrupted Miss Davis," he was a humane monster. What he did not use he destroyed." "Sherman hesitated," Mr. Davis continued, "for a long time between joining the Confederate army and the Union army. We were uncertain which he would do. He finally joined the Union army, thinking, I suppose, that more could be gained by it."

My idea," remarked Mr. Davis, is that Meade was the most skillful General in the Federal army. Gen. Lee once said to me that he could understand the movements of all the generals of the Federal army easier than those of Gen. Meade. Those above Meade never allowed him to display his full power. He was hampered and kept down through jealousy.

Mr. Taylor—How did you regard McClellan? "Well, sir, McClellan was the best trained soldier in the war. While Secretary of War I sent him on three important missions—one to Europe, to study military methods. He returned with a better knowledge of military discipline and methods than was possessed by any of his countrymen." Mr. Taylor—Could he have entered Richmond if he had pushed on across the Chickamauga? "Well," Mr. Davis answered, laughing, "I once knew a farmer who said that if his foresight had been as good as his hindsight he might have made a fortune on cotton. Something of the same kind was probably the fault with McClellan. If he had known the weakness of the Confederates, and had thrown his army across the river, I think he could have entered Richmond. We thought he would, and I believe Gen. Lee thought so, too."

Mr. Taylor—Who do you regard as the greatest of the Confederate Generals? "I consider Gen. Sidney Johnson as the greatest General produced on either side by the war," Gen. Lee sends next in my estimation, and as we move away from the war his desperate struggle against overwhelming numbers will be a marvel in war annals." "Mr. Lincoln was a vulgar joke," Mr. Davis said, "but withal he was a great man. He was wise and he was honest. He could have been of great good to the South if he had lived, and his untimely death was a great loss to us." He was quiet and apparently in deep meditation for several minutes, and then resumed: "Yes, it was a great loss, for he was succeeded by a low, mean demagogue—Johnson—and a demagogue is the worst of men. Johnson was uneducated, but a man of great native ability. He had no convictions, and tried to please all. Lincoln was a man of great vigor of mind, although he was plain and rough. If Mr. Lincoln had lived, the South would have had a President that understood her condition, and he would have been of more benefit to her than any other man could possibly have been. He was an honest man. His death was a great misfortune to the South."

"Pectorin," in my opinion, is just the thing. I have used it in my family for Coughs and Colds for the past four years with the most unvaried success, and to-day my opinion of it is that I continue to think still more of that which I began thinking well of.

It is said in St. Paul that hundreds of teams are now engaged near Bismarck in gathering buffalo bones, for which the sum of $6 a ton is paid by persons who send them to Philadelphia for grinding into fertilizing powder. But so great is the supply that Bismarck is to have a "bone meal" mill of its own within a few months. Such facts bring to mind the enormous and wasteful slaughter of buffaloes, largely the work of men who use only the hides, or of tourist sportsmen who care neither for hides nor meat. At least some of the bones are now to be turned to account.

Gladstone's Three Traits.

At a Liberal gathering, a few evenings ago, in the borough of Marylebone, a proposal was made to ask the premier if he would allow Gladstone to be honored by a birthday in the shape of a button-hole or breast decoration, consisting of the lily supported on each side by a leaf of the oak and the ivy—representing what are considered by many thousands of Mr. Gladstone's admirers as his striking attributes—namely, "Purity, strength and tenacity." The suggestion was adopted amid loud applause.
