Seven hundred and twenty-nine persons were killed and 1,754 were injured in aerial atacks by the Allied forces on German territory up to November 6, 1918, according to official lgures made public in Berlin.

CONTROVERSY ADJUSTED.

The controversy between Major General Graves, the American commander in Siberia, and the Japanese Staff over the disposition of the 1,500 Cossacks of General Kalmitoff's forces who were interned by the Americans at Khabarovsk at their own request, virtually has been adjusted by the gradual dispersal of the Cossacks forces. The Cossacks have been returned to their homes.
