Saying one thing and doing Another.

Mr. Ferrier generally-gets credit for being a very conscientious man, but if he plays the same game often which he did in the House on Tuesday night, he will soon lose that character, as far as his conduct as representative for the Centre Riding, is concerned. While the debate on dual representation was going on, he got up and stated that he did not approve of the principle and yet when the division took place he voted for the Attorney-General's amendment to rotain to do away with such representation, and Mr. Ferrier in effect said that the amendment was right, yet he voted that it was wrong. What was his excuse? He said that "if a 'le petition came from his Riding. k."

Legislature of Ontario.

Toronto, Nov. 18.

Attorney General Macdonald introduce da bill to reduce the sittings of the County, and for other purposes.

Mr. Lyon enquired whether the Government, with several departments of the Ontario Provincial Government, and whether they intend to defray the postages of this House communicating with the said departments.

Attorney General Macdonald introduce da bill to reduce the sittings of the County Courts, and to abolish Recorder's Courts, and for other purposes.

Mr. Lyon enquired whether the Government with be suege of members of this House communent, respecting the postages of this House, and the several departments of the Onnario Torontment is did be postages for the Provincial Government with regard to postages, for the reason that so whether they intend to defray the postages of this House, and the several departments of the Onnario Torontment swith the Dominion Government with regard to postages, for the reason that so whether they intend to defray the postage of members of this House communicating with the said departments.

Attorney General Macdonald introduce da bill to reduce the sittings of the County, and the abolish Recorder's Courts, and to abolish Recorder's Courts, and to abolish Recorder's Courts, and to abolish Recorde and Mr. Ferrier in effect said that the amendment was right, yet he voted that it was wrong. What was his excuse? He said that "if a lepetition came from his Riding, king that dual representation be apolished, he would be happy to give his vote in that way. But what he held was, that the people cared nothing about it." A very lame excuse truly, Mr. Ferrier condemns the principle, yet because he did not get a petition disapproving of it from the electors of the Riding, he voted that the principle was right, for it amounts to that. If this is the way Mr. Ferrier is tact, the electors of the Riding will require to get up petitions on every question which may come up before their member can decide which way he will vote. They will require to have a vigilance committee in perpetual session, in order to instruct their vacillating representative what to do. Mr. Ferrier ought to be ashamed of himself for resorting to such a miserable excuse for supporting the government. He will gain nothing by saying one thing and doing another. He will only earn the contempt of Reformers, while such conduct will not raise him in the estimation of honest, consistent Conservatives.

Mr. Ferrier in his short speech in the House lets us into a secret about readings, and the bulk of our young and readings.

setimation of honest, consistent Conservatives.

Mr. Ferrier in his short speech in the House lets us into a secret about the doings of the Conservatives in the Centre Riding. He said he assigned as a reason for not complying with the request of a deputation that he should stand for his own Riding for the Commons his disapproval of dual representations. This shows that the Conservatives have been feeling their way for a candidate for that Riding. Now that Mr. Ferrier has voted in favour of what he condemmed to the deputation, he may perhaps be induced to reconsider his answer. Of course it is none of our business, but we throw out the hint to the members of that deputation,

THE NEW ARCHEISHOP.—It is announced that Dr. Tait, Lord Bishop of London, has been appointed to the vacant See of Canterbury and the Primacy of England. Dr. Tait was born in Edinburgh, Glasgow and Oxford. While at Oxford as Tutor he was a strenuous opponent of the Tractarian movement, and if he is of the same mind now, his position will give him considerable power in stemming the tide of Ritualism. On the death of Dr. Arnold in 1841, he succeeded him as Head Master of Rugby Grammar School, the position now held by Dr. Temple. In 1850 he accepted from Lord John Russell's Government the Deanery of Carlisle. He there originated and himself conducted nearly every Sunday an additional pulpit service, and in visiting the poor, instructing the ignorant, and superintending charities, worked as hard as a curate. In 1856 he succeeded the late Dr. Bloomfield as Bishop of London. The new Archbishop is thoroughly evangelical, and is strongly opposed to Pusyism on the one hand, and the Broad Churchism of the "Essays and Reviews" style on the other.

The Transport of the evening was his admirable indication, while giving "Samius", and supering the tide of Ritualism. On the death better partonized. Since the above was in type we hear that Mr. Dunn, Principal of the Grammar School pupils will be admitted free and the general gibility of the credit of Guelph. Now 19.
