

SINGAPORE

With a sound and expanding economy, Singapore has a population of only 2.8 million people and enjoys one of the highest per capita incomes in Asia, second only to Japan. This dynamic growth is also reflected in the seafood industry, where total imports average over Cdn$ 700 million/year in the last three years. The local market for seafood is fairly large with a per capita consumption of 32 kgs, making it one of the highest seafood consumers in Asia. Although consumption of seafood in general has taken on a healthy trend, statistics indicate that Canada's share of the import market is small. Canada's range of products are classified under the temperate species, of which consumption is minimal in this region. The most popular species consumed in this region are; black and white pomfret, spanish mackerel, golden snapper, hard tail, coral fish sea bream, dorab and cultured species such as sea bass and grouper. Seafood products that are in demand are the exotic high value varieties like tuna, salmon, lobster, geoduck, abalone, oysters and dried squid.
