

God." If at times our brethren across the line should in the exercise of a not unnatural pride, speak disparagingly of monarchies and boast of their Republican simplicity, at heart they are not insensible to the greatness and glory of the land whence they sprang. As one of their poets says:

"Thicker than water," in one rill,
Through centuries of story,
Our Saxon b'ood has flowed, and still
We share with you its good and ill
The shadow and the glory."
