general about many of the country towns.

No. 7 .- Country Residence or Farm House.

The farmer who is pretty well off, ereets a still larger and different style of house, and as affording an idea of such, as well as of a style of country house in very general use by private families as well as by farmers, we give the following illustrations—No. 7 of front elevation, No. 8 end view, with ground plans,

Nos. 9, 10 and 11. Regarding such style of houses, the author of "The Garden," and "The Furm," says:

"This design is simple, and requires little explanation. A cellar under a part of the house, as shown, will be found sufficient. It is made easy of access from the kitchen, and should an outside entrance be required, it may be had at a small addltlonal expense. The first story has a main and
