The Imperial Bank brought an action against P. J. Travers of Ottawa in the assize court yesterday. The bank loaned T a er $700 in 1908 and are now suing for $500 and interest, which they claim is still due them. Travers admits a liability of $7500 and asks for a return of stocks given as security and also for an insurance reliev now held by the bank. The bank was not prepared to proceed as their Montreal marager, whom they wanted as a witness, was not present and Justice Riddell adjourned the case.

Struck the committee, humsrous objections arose. The bill is narrow in scope and only provides that the eight-hour day shall be observed on all government contracts, excepting transportation service.

Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King endorsed the bill, but pointed out that the agricultural interests would not be favored by it. The house should carefully consider the amendments offered. If the house agreed, he was willing to adopt the principle that the government contracts, excepting transportation service.

FARMERS ARE EXCLUDED FROM EIGHT HOUR BILL

It is Only Drawn To Apply To Government Contracts, Except the Transportation Service.

OTTAWA, Dec. 15.—(Special.)—After recess this evening the house of commons passed the second reading of what is known as the Eight-Hour Day Bill, promoted by A. Verville (Maisonneuve) and went in the committee with certain amendments. The house had at a previous session been com-mitted to this measure, but when it struck the committee, numerous objections arose. The bill is narrow in scope and only provides that the eight-hour day shall be observed on all government contracts, excepting transporta-the house agreed, he was willing to adopt the principle that the govern-ment should be a model employer of

"Why, under the circumstances, did not the government introduce the bill itself?" asked Mr. Borden. Mr. King replied that Mr. Verville had given attention to this measure for years and after having secured the support of the house to the principle, he did not wish to deprive Mr. Verville of the credit.

of the credit.

Bill One-Sided.

After a great deal of criticism of the government for not taking charge of the measure, Dr. Sproule pointed out that the bill was one-sided. He argued that a farmer could not make his farm pay on an eight-hour basis, and at different seasons of the year he has to work ten, twelve and even fourteen hours. If the workmen in the fachours. If the workmen in the fac-tories were only allowed to work eight hours a day, it meant that the farmers would have to work longer, in order to meet the extra cost of commodities as

w. F. McLean (South York) met. Dr. Sproule's objection by caying that the improvement of labor conditions in all countries had been brought about by the regulation of hours of labor by legislation, and the regulation of the limit of hours of labor was essential in the case of those working on railreads. If a man engaged in that occupation was overworked, and the hours of labor not limited, the service could not be efficient, and there would be no protection for the public, rather an element of danger. It had been demonstrated again that switchmen, and those engaged in the running of trains, required regular hours of labor. Grand—"Wildfire," racing comedy. 8.15.

He had not yet heard any reason given why farm laborers should be treated any differently than other classes of labor. He thought the time would come when it would make a great deal of difference to the farmers of the country to have two shifts of men at certain seasons of the year That experiment had proved successful in the west. It was not right to discriminate against the farm laborer. They had been an improvement in the condition of agricultural labor in every country in the world. By legislation and the employment of women on the farm had been reduced by the same agency.

The Tariff Argument.

The memorial presented in support of a tariff commission. All that such a commission could find out with regard to the father resolution compressed the stariff resolution compressed the support of a tariff commission. All that such a commission could find out with regard to the feet stariff upon the different industries had time to develop and get firmly established the protection with the protection for the benefit of industry. Under the impression that done doed reduction was not abandoned every. manufacturers of farming implements, $2,098,383.

According to the census of 1901, the total capital invested in the agricultural industry was $1,787,102,630. The net profit on the year's operations was placed at $331,542,546, or 18.55 per cent. of the capital invested, allowing nothing for the working capital, raw material or labor. On the other hand, on a total capital investment of $446,916,487, in manufacturing industries, there was a profit of 19.82 per cent. after allowing for the cost of raw material, wages and all other expenses. ROME, Dec. 15. JThis afternoon the rain practically ceased, and the floods began to subside. If clear weather contines the danger of further damage

Right to Dividends.

Right to Dividends.

The farmer had as much right as the manufacturer to receive a dividend on his capital investment and on his labor. Owing to the high cost of living and the high cost of the necessary equipment, due very largely to the unjust tariff, the farmer found it difficult to make ends meet.

The memorial further argues at length that the prosperity of the farmer is not dependent upon the prosperity of the manufacturer, and that while certain manufacturing industries may be brought into existence by a protective tariff, these are, in the main, industries which have to be boistered up at the expense of the people, and while adding to the wealth of the nation.

To the memorial is attached a list showing the revenue produced for the year ending March 31 last on articles which the farmers request to be placed on the free list. It is noted that the total revenue produced by the duty on agricultural implements amounts to only $529,299, quite insignificant when compared with the amount which the tariff schedule enables the implement manufacturers to impose on the farmer. The same applies to buggies and carriages, as well as portable engines, threshing machines and buggles and carriages, as well as port-able engines, threshing machines and wagons. On all classes of farm imple-operation and so was allowed to go able engines, threshing maintaines and the time, having just recovered from an wagons. On all classes of farm implements the government collected duty to the amount of $1.218.883.

What It Will Cost. If all the items enumerated were placed on the free list the government would lose, based on revenue of the last fiscal year, 15,89 176. Should the British preference be increased to 50 per cent, the loss to the revenue would be approximately $4,50,0%, so that the total amount of revenue lost to the government due to the reduction demanded by the farmers resolution would amount to approximately $10,788,147.

If the pleasent surplus amounts to $39,-

If the pesent surplus amounts to $30,-00,000 it would still leave a surplus of $10,000,25°. 00,000 it would still leave a surplus of $10,00,85?

The remorial proceeds, "Believing as we do that the provision for revenue by customs duty is economically and morally wand, we desire that free trade be established between Britain and Canada in as short a time as possible without unduly di arran ing existing business conditions." and concludes: "Canadian farmers recognize the protection afforded our country by the mother land and they are willing to do their part in the maintenance of the British Empire by supplying British people with the food products they require in open competition with any other country. If our government will relieve the unjust tax imposed on Canadian farmers by the customs duty they would be quite able to compete in the British market with any other country in the supply of cereals and farm products."

A rescue party, under the direction of Samuel Perry, president of the Leyden Coal Company, was endeavoring early today to break down the wall, and the twelve imprisoned men could be heard working madly in their efforts to gain freedom.
