frightened at the sight of the revolver and, cried out to Laing. "Look out! He's got a gun!" By this time the second man, Boyes, had entered the building and, seeing that his companion had made an entrance to the rear of the teller's wicket, whip-ped his gun from his pocket and ran to his associate's assistance. Laing, realizing that Miss Chapman's crees were a warning to him, snatched a revolver which he kept in the vault for an emergency and, turning and facing the door, was covered with a revolver. Two shots rang out simultaneously, one from the gun in Laing's hand and the other from his assailant's. Mr. Laing staggered for a few minutes, and then opened fire again. By this time wild shots were being fired in the direction of the vault by the second man. Finally, Putwain was wounded in the eye and, dropping his revolver, staggered thru a small office to a nearby window and feil helplessly on the floor. Laing, suffering terrible pain from the bullet hote in his ab-domen, turning round, saw Miss Chapman souffling with the other thief. He opened fire upon him and the orober fied in the direction of the front door. Miss Chapman had taken the gun from him and, as the man left the building, Laing in a dazed condiened at the sight of the revolver ried out to Laing. Detective Nursey picked up seven empty bullet cases on the floor of the bank building and found several bullet holes in the walls. Putwain's muddy footmarks, where he mounted the ledge, were also visible. *

Boyes_staggered into Dawson's home. There was no one in the house and weakened from loss of blood he collapsed on the floor and when Dawson entered the home at 6 o'clock last evening he found Boyes lying unconscious on the floor in a pool of blood. Unaware of what had happened to the youth. Dawson telephoned for a doctor, who on seeing the condition Boyes was in summoned the police ambulance. Boyes was then identified as one of the gun men and, placed under arrest on a charge of abetting with intent, was rushed to the Gen-eral Hospital and placed in a bed in the same ward as his associate Put-wain. His condition is also regarded as being very serious. One of the shots fired at Boyes entered his chest, shots first at Boyes entered his cnest, a second the ankle and a third lodged in the leg. Owing to Boyes not hav-ing received medical attention for over five hours his condition became more serious than if he had been rendered aid when he was shot rendered aid when he was shot.

The Metai Trades Council have asked MRS. P. D. CRERAR the gun from him and, as the man left the building, Laing in a dazed condi-tion staggered after him, firing his revolver. Laing distinctly recalled having fired three shots at the mar-auder, but was of the opinion that his aim was not accurate and that the man had made a clean getaway. It appears from Boyes' condition, how-ever, that all three shots had been well directed, and had wounded him. Boyes, complaining as he left the of-fice of being shot in the arm, got in the motor car and drove down the Kennedy road to the city. Seven Builtet Cases are not to be taken into consideration in any way by such a committee. The Metal Trades Council do hereby de-clare that they will negotiate with all the employers together, or with the employers individually, but as a Metal Trades Council.
