WOMAN'S WORLD.

IF YOU KNEW DAD!

It is on Decoration Day that my pa swells with pride. And talks in words of fire of the gallant men who died. A-swing of their country in the dark days of the war. He seems the bravest mortal that a feller ever saw. Why, you'd think he'd been a colonel or a general, maybe. And in the very fore rank of his chev'ry soldiers he. Had won a hundred battles, perhaps been wounded bad! But, no, you wouldn't think so, if you knew dad!

Ma says, "Pa's brave enough, I 'low, but he's so mortal slow. That when he'd got his courage up there was no war, you know. And pa looks daggery, and remarks, "Matilda, you must own you begged me not to go because you 'as afraid to stay alone. You know," adds pa, quite proudly, "I'd have enlisted, too. But you said it was my duty plain to stay and care for you." Of course I wasn't living then—I only wish I had. But I have my opinion, for I know dad!

—Edgar Welton Cooley in the May Woman's Home Companion.

A Woman is Not a "Person"

A most amusing incident recently occurred in St. John, N.B., where a Miss Mabel French, after passing her examination with high honors, was denied permission to practise law in the supreme court because, according to the "act," only "persons" were allowed to practise law, and "women were not persons"—"only men were persons."

Soon after a woman was arrested for drunkenness, and on trial pleaded "not guilty," being "a woman" and "not a person"—therefore not amenable to the law. The magistrate found the law to be "that any person found drunk was liable to fine or imprisonment," and ruled that according to the decision of the supreme court "women were not persons, and could not be imprisoned or fined," so the prisoner was discharged.

As a result the legislature promptly passed an "act" designating women as "persons," so Miss French was allowed to practise law.

But no study of woman's political progress can be just that does not take into account her rapid and enormous development in the faculty of organization, and in intelligent interest in public concerns. These are absolutely essential to the formation of a democracy, to the wise and safe exercise of the franchise, and it is precisely in these that the phenomenal record of the woman's movement is most clear.

The strongest proof of woman's long efforts is her lack of association with religion, and her strong proof of her rapid approach to equality is in the uncounted thousands who now gather together in clubs and societies for every desirable, charitable, reformative, educational, social, political and of all kinds to an increasing number of their respective memberships is not at hand—Charlotte Perkins Gilman.

Women's Institute.

By way of preparation for the Women's Institute meetings, of which there will be about 400 this year, the superintendent of institutes called a meeting at the Guild hall, and there were twenty-two in attendance. Discussion was devoted to how the work could be systematized to the best advantage. Those present had an opportunity of looking over the Macdonald Institute and were grateful for the arrangements. A greater number of farmers' daughters are attending.

THE WORLD PATTERN DEPARTMENT

1874—Misses' Tucked Jumper. Slipped on over the head. Pattern No. 1874. All Seams Allowed.

Another of the slipped-on-over-the-head jumpers which young girls have been affecting so extensively for several months past is portrayed in this pretty little model made of pink champagne messaline. If made in linen, it will be found an excellent fashion for frequent laundering.

The pattern is in three sizes—12 to 14 years. For a miss of 15 years, the jumper requires 2-8 yards of material 20 inches wide, or 1-12 yards 36 inches wide, or 1-34 yard 42 inches wide; 6 yards of material 20 inches wide.

Price of pattern—10 cents.

chiefly thru the influence of the attention to the work done. While the subjects to be taken up at the institute meetings will embrace such matters as hygiene in the home, art in the home, food for the children, social rights and duties of farmers, ventilation and sanitation, water supply production and handling of milk, poultry raising, etc., the demonstrations in cooking will be confined to meats and vegetables, and will form a basis for talks on the value of the food values of the more common foods.

The delegates expressed themselves as highly pleased with the progress made thru the province, and recognized the probability of the institute becoming an increasing factor in the home life of the farm.

The National Council.

OTTAWA, April 18.—At their morning session the National Council of Women expressed exception to persons being allowed to get marriage licenses without witnesses.

The advocacy of the raising of the limit of ages for marriage will be forwarded in many districts.

In Society.

The next meeting of the Trafalgar Daughters will be held on Tuesday, the 23rd inst., at 3 p.m., in Annet's Hall, Queen's Park. All ex-pupils and ex-teachers of the Ontario Ladies' College are cordially invited to be present.

THE WINNER OF THE DOLL CONTEST.

MISS ELEANOR BURNS.

In Dolly Varden Costume.

This is Miss Eleanor Burns, who won the first prize of $25 cash in the recent Dolly Varden doll contest. The little lady was much elated at her success, and in a bright little note addressed to Mr. Frank Mercer, at the Yonge-street store of the Dolly Varden Shoe Company, she said: "I could not believe it when Mr. Mercer telephoned me and told me, 'I assure you that I was surprised beyond imagination. I am exceedingly grateful for the cheque for $25 which you handed me.'"

Two Girls Will Also Return to Batavia, N.Y., With Sheriff.

Fred W. Miller, wanted for forgery and other offences at his home, Batavia, N.Y., was arrested by Detective Mackie in a George-street house Thursday night. With him at the time was Jennie Johnson, 18 years of age, of the same place. She was arrested by Detective Mackie. Detective Kennedy arrested Lillian Putney, 18 years of age, at 123 West Adelaide-street.

Charges of vagrancy were laid against the two women, but the detectives say that their parents want them in Batavia.

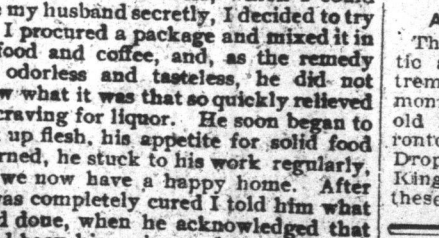

Sheriff Charles A. Williams of Genesee County, who offered $25 reward for Miller's arrest, took the prisoners back home with him yesterday.

Miller is 22 years of age, he is a carpenter and deserted a wife and children on March 3.

She Patiently Bore Disgrace

A Sad letter from a lady whose Husband was Dissipated.

How She Cured Him with a Secret Remedy.

"I had for years patiently borne the disgrace, suffering, misery and privations due to my husband's drinking habits. Hearing of your marvellous remedy for the cure of drunkenness, which I could give my husband secretly, I decided to try it. I procured a package and mixed it in his food and coffee, and as the remedy was odless and tasteless, he did not know what it was. He soon began to pick up flesh, his appetite for solid food returned, he stuck to his work regularly, and we now have a happy home. After I had done, when he acknowledged that it had been his saving, as he had not the resolution to break off of his own accord. I hereby advise all women afflicted as I was to give your remedy a trial."

Free package and pamphlet, giving full and true facts in plain, reliable, English, sent on receipt of 10¢ in stamps. Address: Dr. J. C. Williams, 100 Queen-street, West, Toronto.

SPECIAL TREATMENT FOR YOUNG OFFENDERS

Juvenile Delinquents' Bill in Senate—What It Aims at and Why.

OTTAWA, April 18.—(Special.)—In the senate to-day Hon. R. W. Scott moved the second reading of the Juvenile Delinquents' Bill. It was not proposed to press the measure thru this session, but to put it before the public for consideration.

The bill declares that "expedient" that youthful offenders should be classed or dealt with as ordinary criminals, the welfare of the community demanding that they should be on the contrary treated as special cases.

Senator MacDonald, of Victoria, declared that in nine out of ten cases parents were responsible, chiefly thru neglect and indifference, for children going wrong.

Senator Cloran stated there had long been crying need for special dealing with young offenders, particularly in Montreal and other centres of population.

MARSEILLAISE NOT THEIRS.

La Presse Appreciates Compliment, But Denies That It Was Appropriate.

MONTREAL, April 19.—(Special.)—La Presse intimates that the French-Canadians are not particularly infatuated with the Marseillaise, the French national hymn. That paper this evening says:

"In order to be agreeable to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, they played La Marseillaise in London. We recognize in this the spirit of the entire cordial, but we have also to remark that, in spite of the national affection we entertain for the land of our ancestors, the French-Canadians have nothing in common with La Marseillaise."

We are the French of anti-revolutionary days and consequently La Marseillaise has not become in vogue among us. Our respect is, however, due to the spirit of the hymn, and we must not fail to thank the English for their good will, who, having no other way to compliment our nationality, had recourse to an interpretation which is a most courteous sentiment.

"We have, in fact, no idea of protesting against a custom which deeply moves us and which also takes the form of exultant patriotism."

SUFFERING BABIES.

Mothers can find sure relief for their suffering little ones in Baby's Own Tablets. These tablets are a gentle laxative that do not "fine" the little one, and cure all the minor ills of babies and young children. They are pleasant to take, prompt in action, and unlike "soothing" stuffs, they never do harm, and the mother has the satisfaction of knowing that they contain no government analyst.

Thousands of mothers give their little ones nothing but Baby's Own Tablets when they have colic, stomach trouble, indigestion, colds or worms bother the baby, or when the baby is teething. Please come. Mrs. Joseph Mercer, of Pleasant-bis-street, says: "My baby was a great sufferer from constipation, but thanks to Baby's Own Tablets, the trouble has disappeared. The tablets are sold by all druggists or by mail at 25 cents a box, from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont."

FAVORS ROUTE NO. 2.

City Officials With C. B. Smith Look Over Eastern Railway Entrance.

The mayor, with Corporation Counsel Fullerton, City Engineer Rust and Consulting Engineer C. B. Smith, yesterday afternoon paid another visit of inspection in connection with the alteration of the route for the entrance of the railways, submitted by Mr. Smith.

"I am still in favor of route No. 2," said his worship afterwards, adding that Mr. Smith appeared to also look favorably upon the route in question, which practically follows the line of the old arm of the Toronto and York Mills Northern proposed route along Ashbridge's Marsh, rising gradually by embankment, till about Greenwood-avenue, where it crosses the tracks of the Queen-street by bridges north and east to the golf grounds, cutting across the grounds easterly and across King-street by a bridge, running south of the road till about opposite Scarborough Heights, where it turns to the north.

Buchanan's Wife

The Story of a Woman Who Dared to Resist the Love and Hopes of Her Husband.

By Doris Hill, Formerly Published by the Publishers of Harper & Bros., New York and London.

"I expect that's just it, isn't it?" said the girl. "They have no sense of humor at all. They are tragic. It frightens me somehow. There's something fatal about it. It's unnatural. And, of course, it can't go on forever. I wonder what will happen! It reminds me," she said, "of what certain people in Paris used to tell me about the marriage of the Earl of Stroupe's son, Lord Stratton, to the elder Isaac de Monsigny, the present Isaac de Monsigny's mother. She died when the child was a year or so old. It seems that these two were just as passionately and seriously in love as Betty and Harry Faring are, and just as careless of the rest of the world. They had no humor, either, and I expect people can't live long without it. These people told me that Lord Stratton and his wife together were a sight that no one could ever forget. They said that the two would walk about the park at Mon-signy for hours, never saying a word, but moving so that they touched each other as they walked. The said that Isaac de Monsigny would be in the room with his husband and that being near him, touching him somehow, it couldn't last. What will happen to Betty and Harry?"

Mrs. Crowley stirred impatiently. "Oh, they will tire of making gods of each other eventually," she said, "and they'll become sensible human beings like the rest of us. I expect, I wish they wouldn't be so long about it. They are a great trial to me."

The girl shook her head. "But, oddly enough, when tragedy came, it was first to her—lightning out of a blue sky."

XL

STAMBOLOF GOES.

She spent the week-end with the Farings, as had been arranged, and the time passed not so ill as she had feared. It was not gay, to be sure; for there was no one else at the cottage, Beatrice apologized, with a little, half-ashamed laugh. "We have neglected people," she said, "that now I simply dare not ask any one here. Every one is angry at us. Still, the two lovers made a heroic effort to descend from their heights and play a brief role as human beings, and consequently enough."

It was on Monday morning that the blow came. The three were sitting on the long, shaded garden porch of the house waiting for Arabella Crowley's motor, which was to come and bear her to Red Rock.

"As they sat there talking a servant brought the letters which had come in the morning post, and Beatrice Faring held up one of them with an exclamation of surprise.

"From Paris," she said. "And a very fat letter! See all the stamps. It's not from Lord Stroupe or from Stambolof, for I know their hands." She held the envelope out towards Allan Trevor.

"Do you recognize the writing?" she asked.

"A touch of pink came into the girl's cheeks.

"It's from Mr. Braithwaite, I think," she said.

"What in the world," cried the elder woman, "can be so critical to me such a huge letter about? To be sure, he sent us a gorgeous wedding present, but we never wrote to each other. Present to open the envelope, and unfolded the many sheets.

"My dear Mrs. Faring," she read, aloud. "Stambolof is dead, and after." She gave a sharp cry of her heart, and her eyes flashed swiftly towards Allan Trevor. The written sheets appeared from her lap to the floor of the porch, and lay there scattered. The girl had risen to her feet, and stood there, her hands pressed together over her heart. Mrs. Faring started up towards her.

"Oh, dearest, dearest!" she cried, sobbing. "I didn't know! I should have been careful. I read without thinking. But the girl pushed her back when she would have taken her into her arms."

"Please—go on," she said, very quietly. "Please read the letter." I am not sorry. He wished to die. I—oh, please, please go on! Don't you see that I cannot bear waiting! The letter was long, and she looked towards the sheets of paper which she had taken from her husband, who nodded towards her at her. She tried to read, but her hands holding the paper shook nervously, and she thrust the thing towards Faring.

"I cannot," she said. "Read it, Harry," and Faring went on with what young Braithwaite had written.

"After consulting with Lord Stroupe," he read, "I have decided to write to you and tell you how his death came about, and to ask you to break the thing as gently as you can to Miss Trevor. It seems to me very terrible that I should have to be messenger of such news to her, because, as I think you know, I care for her more than for anyone else living, and she loved Boris Stambolof. Still it must be. I shall tell, for I was with Stambolof at the end, and after, and there is no other way to relieve me of my unwelcome task."

"You know, I believe, about that unfortunate affair of ten years ago—the affair that wrecked Stambolof's life and put an end to the life of the Countess Amelie de Colonne as well—as it was told to the life of her husband. It has been believed without question that Stambolof, in a very fit moment, killed the Count de Colonne because De Colonne had grossly insulted his wife at a dinner-party at Stambolof's house, Bonfleur-lebeau. Well, it appears that the Frenchman was left for dead in the hall of his chateau, there remained some spark of life in him, and a certain faithful old servant discovered this, and secretly nursed his master back to health. Then, as secretly, Colonne went away, and spent ten years in the east and among
