the cotton world will have 10,000,000 bales from this crop available 10,000,000 bales from this crop available 10 respinners' purposes.

If present 11,1000 are not inducement chough for southern planters to sell, it is hard to see what limit will incre the staple to market except from chronic bulls and those made over-confident by the promise of much higher prices.

The mear future of market, while largely influenced by the elestern question, will 10.75 hardly show a declining tendency. The market when the conditions of foreign trade is against this theory for the time at least. Unless the immense of foreign trade is against this theory for the time at least. Unless the immense weight of present values on the world's money markets force a decline its present strength will likely endure with the chances favoring a higher range in the near future.
