MODERATE LABOR HOLDS KEY TO THE SITUATION

Future of Great Britain Depends on It, Says Miss
Ward

SAYS CANADA AND ENGLAND UNITE

Able Reviews Present State of Affairs in the Motherland

The whole future of Great Britain depends upon the moderate laborer taking an intelligent interest in the running of his own union, declared Miss Irene Ward, speaker of the English Parliamentary group, in giving the last address of her five weeks' Canadian tour before a large audience in the Church of England Institute last evening.

Miss Ward opposed Robert Smillie, the Labor leader, in the last general election in England and was defeated but has been offered the Conservative nomination in the next election.

She has toured Canada under the auspices of the National Council of Education and sails from Saint John today to return to England.

DOLE NECESSARY.
She gave a very clear and impressive explanation of the industrial situation in Great Britain today, declaring the unemployment dole to be absolutely necessary under the conditions in the vital export industries at the present time.

She Douglas Hazen, chairman of the local committee of the Council of Education, president and the hearty thanks of her audience were presented to Miss Ward on the motion of Sheriff A. A. Wilson, seconded by Mrs. Heber Vroom, regent of the Municipal Chapter of the I.O.D.E.

Sir Douglas Hazen, in introducing Miss Ward, referred to the important events which had taken place in Europe since Miss Ward had left England to commence her tour in Canada and he mentioned the fact of Locarno and the settlement of the Irish boundary dispute.

EXPRESSES GRATITUDE.
Miss Ward prefaced her address with an expression of deep appreciation of the hospitality everywhere extended to her in Canada, which, she said, would always be a pleasant memory. She had been immensely struck by the interest, knowledge and enthusiasm with which the affairs of Great Britain were discussed in Canada.

She hoped that she would have an opportunity of giving to her own country the knowledge of Canadian affairs which she had been gaining. She believed the knowledge of the sympathy which existed in Canada would spur on the British people in solving the problems of their present period of depression and that a closer co-operation and better understanding with the people of Canada would make all the difference in solving the problems of national life in both countries.

BOTH SIDES PRESENTED.
She said she would present fairly both sides of the questions in speaking of conditions in Great Britain and she pointed out that the people today were better fed, housed, educated and clothed than they had been in 1913 or ever before.

The general social reforms had brought a great step forward in social life, but on the other hand there was general depression in industrial life such as had never been known.

She read an article written at the close of the Napoleonic war which showed that conditions had been much the same in England then as now, but she pointed out that 40 per cent. of the cost of the Napoleonic war was paid during the war and only 20 per cent. of the recent war had been paid while it was in progress.

PRESENT CONDITIONS.
She reviewed the events which had brought about present day conditions. Before the close of the war it had been predicted that there would be great industrial depression on the termination of the war and Miss Ward believed that had the depression come at that time the people would have made the necessary sacrifices and been in a better spirit than they were today.

But the depression had not come all at once. On the contrary after the war conditions in Europe had left England without a serious competitor in the markets of the world and prosperity reigned for two or three years during which period the people got the habit of spending and relaxing from the strain of war days they set about enjoying life regardless of the fact that the war had still to be paid for.

COAL STRIKE OF 1921.
Then came the coal strike of 1921. Extremists among the miners' leaders declared that the workers were not getting their share out of the profits of industries and they pointed to the comparatively small group which had made money in the war. Forgetting the hundreds who had lost everything as they answered their country's call—the miners' leaders based their values on those who had lost their lives.

GERMANY'S POSITION.
Explaining Germany's position, Miss Ward said that Germany's defeated currency had enabled her to send into the steel centres of Great Britain steel that cost 80 shillings a ton less than the steel produced in that centre, because Great Britain was trying to live up to the standard of 1914 and was paying her debts at the same value at which they were contracted.

SERIOUS SITUATION.
To give a realization of how serious the situation was in Great Britain, Miss Ward said that 510 coal pits had been closed down in 12 months and 110,000 men had been thrown out of employment.

In Canada, she said, two subjects had been most generally discussed by those with whom she had come in contact, the subjects of immigration and the British unemployment dole. There were, she said, 450,000 in England who were unemployed and it would not be in the interests of Canada to send these to her new settlers.

COMMUNISM ON WANE.
She spoke also of the miners' demand for a further increase of wages in 1924 which was granted by the owners with the realization that it could mean a further depression of the industry.

While, she said, the communists leaders had urged the miners to make their demands of the absolute necessity of the moment, Miss Ward declared that communism was not growing in England. It existed merely through force of circumstances among those who were down and out and there would be no communism when a settled policy was evolved.

"We have done it before and we can do it again," said Miss Ward, "as long as we work for the ultimate good of every person who has the right to the protection of the British flag."

She closed her address by saying that she hoped Great Britain and Canada might be able to work together in bringing peaceful prosperity and a united empire.

Letters to The Editor

ANIMAL RESCUE LEAGUE

To the Editor of The Times-Star:
Sir—Will you kindly allow me, through your column, to express the surprise and deep regret with which I learned of the resignation of Miss Lillian Hazen of the secretaryship of the Animal Rescue League, an office she has so ably filled since the inception of that work.

In the fall of 1918 Mrs. Huntington Smith, founder and president of the Animal Rescue League of Boston, lectured here and gave a donation for wards starting a league here for the relief of small animals. During Mrs. Smith's stay a storm blanket, donated by a friend of animals, was presented to a teamster named Sullivan for recognition of his kind treatment of his bay mare, Queenie, and Market Square was quite thronged with people to witness the proceedings.

At the organization of the work a little later the officers of the executive were Mrs. C. J. Coster, president; Mrs. W. F. B. Paterson, vice president; Miss Lillian Hazen, treasurer and assistant secretary, and Mrs. Thomas Walker, secretary and dear guiding spirit of us all. Many ladies of prominence were on the executive whose names I do not at present recall.

On the retirement of Mrs. Walker from active duties Miss Hazen was appointed general secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Paterson, managing director of the shelter, an office considered necessary in most work of the kind but which seems to have been abolished here.

The league saw many weeks of weary search before a place could be found in which to carry on the relief work for small animals; much opposition was encountered, many obstacles arose, but with courage, all were surmounted.

In a large measure the humane educational and practical as well as work that has been accomplished both the standing the Animal Rescue League now holds with the public is owing to the untiring efforts of Miss Hazen. During the years of our work together in the interest of suffering helpless creatures no more loyal comrade, or devoted, unselfish worker could be found, and this publicly I wish to express my appreciation of her worth. Miss Hazen's interests and sympathies are broad and no warfare work of any kind appeals to her in vain.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for space, Sincerely, GEORGIE H. PATERSON.

When the Coil in the Cooking Element of Your Electric Range Burns Out

WHEN an electric light bulb burns out you take it as a matter of course and replace it with a new one.

When the coil in the cooking element of your electric range burns out the consequences are more serious—and more expensive, depending upon the type of element it is.

If it is an open element the chances are the porcelain is badly cracked, broken and crumbled and will have to be replaced as well as the coil. And you will have to have an expert electrician come and do the job—more expense.

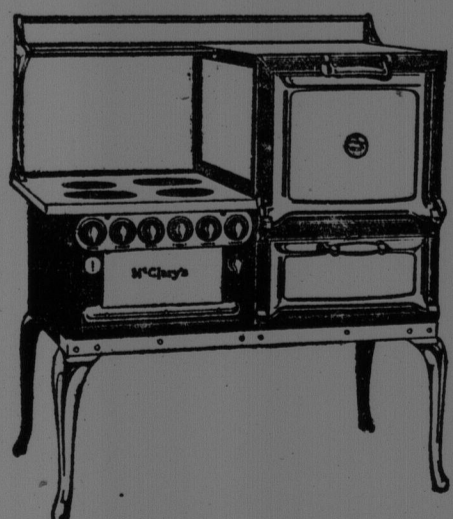

If it is a solid iron or porcelain element with the coils embedded inside and connected up in the usual way you will have to buy an entire new element and you will require an expert electrician to replace it—more trouble, delay and expense.

With McClary's Speediron Element you need no expert. The unit is simply lifted out and you can either replace the burnt out coil yourself or take it to your electrical dealer and have it done for a few cents while you wait. Then you just drop the unit back into place.

The heating coils of the Speediron Element, because of their perfect protection, are immune from the effects of dirt, grease, forks or other foreign substances which cause burnouts in the coils of open elements.

How to Remove a McClary's SPEEDIRON Element

When a coil burns out and you want to remove the McClary's Speediron Element, you merely lift it up. It takes less time than it does to unscrew a bulb from the lamp socket and it takes less effort to put it back than it does to screw in a new bulb. There are no screws or nuts or wire connections to remove or loosen. In a few minutes you put in a new coil, drop the Element back in its place—that's all.

Come and See It

If you have an Electric Range now, you will want to see this new, splendid improvement, because you know all about Electric Range troubles now. If you are going to buy an Electric Range you should see the Speediron Element in McClary's Electric Range—the only trouble-proof Element on the market. The new Speediron Elements are now on view at all leading dealers. Come and see it—today.
