YESTERDAY'S PATRONS OF OUR THEATRE were transported by depiction and on the waiting wings of music to those early days of conquest when Old World sea rovers and adventurers set foot upon this continent and by the fair land to themselves. More than this they revelled in the wonderful new art of re-living the actual scenes of splendor and combat that characterized these early struggles. Needless to say Geraldine Farrar, Wallace Reid, Raymond Hatton, Hobart Bosworth and thousands of others painted the picture truthfully by their wonderful acting and producer DeMille excelled all his former efforts.

THE RING.

World Legalize Ring Bouts.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 23.—Professional boxing, which has been illegal in New York since last November, again would be legalized under the terms of a bill introduced today by Assemblyman Martin G. McCut. The measure would create a state commission to regulate the sport, would provide for licenses for clubs and would require that during war time part of the license fees would be devoted to furnishing athletic supplies for army training camps. It would restrict the numbers of clubs to not exceeding seven in New York, three in Buffalo and two in any other part of the state.

Willard and Fulton.

New York, Jan. 23.—Jesse Willard yesterday declared that he would not fight a public assurance that he would not fight a chance at the heavyweight title. The plater's showing against Billy Mike disappointed the champion. He is not anxious to have Fulton make a name for himself at the expense of the soldiers.

SEVEREST BOUT IN RING HISTORY

Went Only 11 Rounds, Lasting 26 Minutes, But Was Very Sanguinary

While battles in the old prize ring often lasted more than a hundred rounds, and were measured in time by hours, pugilistic historians are generally agreed that the severest bout ever fought was not one of these long-drawn-out engagements, but a contest which lasted only eleven rounds and occupied only twenty-six minutes.

It was ninety-one years ago, on Jan. 2, 1827, that Jim Ward, champion of England, met Peter Crawley, at Rye, Sussex. Crawley, a butcher by trade, had been fighting since he was fifteen, but this was his first try for championship honors. The memorable battle opened with a minute or two of sparring. Then the fireworks began.

Ward landed two punches to Crawley's one, but the latter had the advantage in height and weight, and his punches were like a mule's kick. When the second round ended both men were covered with blood. In the third, fourth and fifth rounds Ward was felled with terrific blows on the nose and mouth. The rapid action and terrible punishment was already telling on both men, and the sixth round ended when both fell together, after an exchange of sledge-hammer punches. At the end of the seventh round, after Ward had landed some terrible blows, Crawley appeared all in and in 10 to 1 was offered against him.

Ward tried to land the knockout in the eighth, but so wearied himself that he fell forward on his face. The worn gladiators accomplished little in the ninth and tenth rounds, when both fell from sheer exhaustion. In the eleventh it was apparent that Ward was scarcely able to stand, and Crawley, with a final summing of his strength, put all his winning power into a blow which caught Ward full on the mouth. The champion was rendered senseless and deaf to the call of "time," and Peter Crawley, himself unable to stand, was proclaimed champion of England.

In a battle shorter in time than a modern ten-round bout Jim Ward became an ex-champion. For hours he remained unconscious, and he was forced to spend several days in bed, while the victor's condition was little better. Hundreds of Ward's backers were ruined by the result of this brutal contest. Although the rightful champion, Peter resigned his new honors rather than defend them against Ward, and Jim resumed the title when he had fully recovered.
