TURKEY'S TROUBLES

A writer in the current number of the tional aspect of this immigration ques-tion in an address delivered the other North Amercan Review expresses the belief that the European powers have deday to the prosperous men of Toronto. He showed them how much of their cided on the partition of Turkey, and He showed them now much of their prosperity depends upon the immi-grant. "When," said he, "I speak of immigration, I am not talking about the man with the narrow pants and that the Triple Alliance had years ago arranged the present theft of Tripoli by The Young Turks are beset by tin trunk, but about you, who have built your $5,000 houses in Rosedale many difficulties. With all the danger of aggression from without, the troubles of the Young Turks are being multiplied within. Their hold of political power is very precarious, and it is only possible through their control of the army. If they continue losing territory, they will be compelled to fight in order to retain control of the army. Their rule at present is one of military despotism, and there is danger of rivalry and quarrels in the Young Turkish party itself. If they are weakened by dissension,

And we hope the reminder will bear fruit in an early demand from the Toronto Board of Trade to the Ontario government "for a town site in New Ontario with roads made and schools built, on the completion of which the members of the board might guarantee to clear the town site and put settlers in on the most reason-able possible terms." As Mr. Hawkes says, the method of sending a settle in with a family, two arms, a bag of flour, and an axe is not good enough for the twentieth century; it is what the grandfathers of present Toronto men did fifty years ago. If a government considers a country good en to run a railroad into, it should good enough to have a grant set aside for the development of every mile of land along the tracks, so that the revcnue from the railroad would be great-er.
