In Lighter Vein

Why?—For a whole solid hour the captain had been lecturing his men on "The Duties of a Soldier," and he thought that now the time had come for him to test the results of his discourse.

Casting his eye around the room he fixed on Private Murphy as his first victim.

"Private Murphy," he asked, "why should a soldier be ready to die for his country?"

The Irishman scratched his head for a while; then an ingratiating and enlightening smile flitted across his face. "Sure, captain," he said pleasantly, "you're quite right. Why should he?"—Boston Transcript.

Every Moment Counted.—Elihu Root was cross-examining a young woman in court one day. "How old are you?" he asked. The young woman hesitated. "Don't hesitate," said Mr. Root. "The longer you hesitate the older you are."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Hubby's Preference.—"Let us go into this department store until the shower is over."

"I prefer this harness shop" said her husband. "You won't see so many things you want."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

He Would Divide.—"Yes," said the eminent specialist to the tramp who had called upon him, "I will examine you carefully for ten dollars."

"All right, Doc," said the tramp, resignedly, "do that, an' if you find it I'll give you half."

Headed Off.—"Did you tell her when you proposed to her that you were unworthy of her? That always makes a hit with them."

"I was going to, but she told it to me first."—Houston Post.

Careless Talker.—"I thought you said, Grouch, that you would never permit your wife to run an auto?"

"So I did; but she happened to hear me say it."—Judge.

It Was a Raincoat.—A Kalamazooan was speaking of the story about the man who complained that the soles came off his new boots after he had worn them a week and who was told by the dealer:

"My friend, those are cavalry boots; you must have been walking in them."

The citizen said: "That sounds like a yarn, but here is something that actually happened to me. I bought a raincoat that was guaranteed and took it back because the color faded out in spots. And the storekeeper had the nerve to say: 'I sold you this for a raincoat. You have been wearing it in the sun.'"

How Sad.—During one of the aviation meets a young woman went through the hangars under the guidance of a mechanic. After asking all the usual foolish questions that aviators and their assistants have to answer during a tour of inspection, she wanted to know: "But what if your engine stops in the air—what happens? Can't you come down?" "That's exactly the trouble," responded the willing guide. "There are now three men up in the air in France with their engines stopped. They can't get down and are starving to death."

Burnt.—"What a pity we have no artists who can paint like the old masters!" said the sincere lover of pictures.

"But," replied Mr. Cumrox, who had just acquired a spurious signature, "the great trouble is that we have."—Washington Star.

Most Disappointing.—Gambart, the art dealer, sent Holman Hunt to the Holy Land to paint a picture similar to the "Light of the World." Hunt returned with "The Scapegoat," which so disappointed Gambart that he refused to accept it. Seeing Linnell, the painter, shortly afterward, he plaintively said: "I wanted a nice religious picture, and he bainted me a great goat."
