

was a grave evil, there was a vast amount of property at expense of other. Many ~~men~~ were enriched, thus of thousands were made worse off & often reduced to slavery. The business of a money-lender was one which could not be carried on by a man of clean feelings.

~~gully~~ In many countries, <sup>as ports of call</sup> commercially undeveloped with an ignorant peasantry & an unscrupulous race of money lenders of another nationality, the political dangers involved in the continuance of these practices are such that even modern governments find it necessary to interfere, it being a Jew had nothing to do with it. Of course he was Oriental. The same thing in case of Parsee money lenders in India, he is of another religion & of a longer headed race.

Egypt & Russia two examples at present time.

The Armenians have gone down the tube, whenever people needed money the merchant, when reasons had etc. The English government ~~did not~~ want to prohibit them, too much like interference yet was forced to set up banks where people could borrow in order not to let this class of vipers carry on their practices without any opposition.

In Russia the Czar has been forced to expel whole sets of Jews who came for purposes of money lending because of their being dangerous to the people with their extortions.