Questions and Answers. Miscellaneous.

Paying for Cattle.

About a month ago I sold six head of cattle to a dealer. Two weeks after the bargain was made one of them took sick. I sent for the veterinarian and after examination he concluded she would get all right. We gave medicine, but the animal finally died. Can I collect the whole, or part of the price for which the cattle were sold?

M. D.

Ans.—You could hardly collect anything on the heifer which died, but we see no reason why the dealer should not take the remaining five animals which he purchased and pay for them in full.

Agreement.

Some time ago my parents and I drew up an agreement whereby I took over the farm. I was to keep them as long as they lived and pay off the remaining mortgage on the place. Our Township Clerk drew up the papers and gave me a deed of the property. Now, as I must join the colors, I want to hand this property back to my parents. Must I have the writings drawn by the same man or may I have the work done by a lawyer? The mortgage on the place is in the lawyer's hands.

G. L.

Ans.—We see no reason why you should not have the work done by a lawyer, as they are really two separate transactions.

Itchy Legs.

1. I have a three-year-old draft mare in good condition, which has itchy legs. What treatment would you advise?

2. I have a six-weeks-old calf which does not thrive. What treatment do you recommend?

M. R. W.

Ans.—1. Purge the mare with 10 drams aloes and 2 drams ginger, and after the bowels have regained their normal condition give 2 ounces Fowler's solution of arsenic sprinkled on the feed, twice daily for a week. Make a solution of corrosive sublimate, 30 grains to a pint of water. Heat this to 105 degrees Fahrenheit and rub well into the skin twice daily until itchiness ceases. The purgative should be avoided if the mare is in foal.

2. It is possible that the calf is suffering from an attack of indigestion brought on by an improper diet; not having the milk at the same temperature at each feed; feeding in dirty pails, or housing the calf in unclean quarters. Give the calf 4 ounces of raw linseed oil. The calf should be kept in clean quarters and fed on a little new milk at blood temperature. Care should be taken that the milk is always fed at the same temperature. Add a little lime-water to the milk, and see that the utensils are scalded occasionally to keep them thoroughly clean.

Sweet Clover for the Silo.

I have 12 acres of sweet clover, but, owing to the scarcity of help and the price of seed corn, I thought it would be a good idea to fill my silo with this crop instead of corn. What time should it be ensiled? Would it be all right to re-fill again in later summer? Can sweet clover be ensiled as satisfactorily as corn? Will cattle eat it? How does its feeding value compare with corn?

W. S. W.

Ans.—Sweet clover has been ensiled with more or less success. It is cut at the time of cutting for hay and is ensiled while still fresh. It may be cut with the binder or mower and should be thoroughly tramped in the silo. It is only recently that this crop has been ensiled in this Province, and while clover silage will be eaten by the stock and they will do very well on it, it does not appear to be relished the same as corn. The composition of the plant is a little different; consequently, the chemical action which takes place in the silo tends to deteriorate its quality more than it does corn. The clovers contain a large percentage of protein; corn is more of a carbonaceous plant. If weather conditions were favorable for the curing of sweet clover for hay, we would prefer to save it that way. However, in catchy hay weather it would be better to ensile the sweet clover rather than have it spoiled in curing in the field. It is doubtful if there is any crop that will take the place of corn for silage purposes. Oats, peas and vetch, or a mixture of oats and peas, gives very good results, and, as previously stated, sweet clover has been ensiled.
