The war in the Duchies has netually con menced by the Danes having seized the Island of Echinern, and several small vessels bearing the German flag. The Schleswig Holstein army is posted about the city of Schleswig, whilst the Danish forces have crossed over from the Island of Alsen, and the cavalry, which was posted in love.) were then spread, and their righness and Jutland, has advanced over the centre of the country, and long before this the two belligerents clamations have been issued on both sides, and nothing seems possible to avert a bloody engagement except the fact, of which every one is conscious, that any effusion of blood brought about by the attack of either army will be wholly unavailing. The Russian squadron continues hovering on the east coast but no certain information seems to exist as to whether there are any troops on board ready to co-operate with the Danes. General Willised, aided by a Bavarian Colonel Van Tayn, the leader of the Free Corps of 1818, appears ready to engage with the Danes; but, notwithstanding all this show of warfare, we should not be in the smallest degree surprised if negotiations were entered into at the last moment. The diplomatsts, however, have all quitted the scene, so that it is difficult to guess how matters can be patched up. The Seldeswig Holstein steam gun heat, Vonder Taun, has been blown up by her commander to prevent her falling into the hands of the Danes. Some of the States of Germany, Hanover
