WALKERTON.

Mr. Frank Rennie M.P.P. and son Joe were at London on Monday and closed a deal for a fine new sixteen passenger motor bus for the Rennie Livery. The new bus, which represents an outlay of about two thousand four hundred dollars, has a Ruggies chassis and is the latest word in motor busses. It will be used on the regular bus service and will also be available for side-trips for picnics, trips to neighboring towns, etc. The new outfit is to be ready for delivery about April 15th.

Billy Matell, who knows all about handling a car, had a close call from breaking his neck as well as his reputation as a careful driver when he went over the curbing of the Durham Street pavement when turning around opposite Trux's office the other day. The embankment is very steep at that point but the car which appeared to be a well trained one, simply stood on its nose and no harm done.

The Provincial Secretary's Dept. sent up Provincial Constable Blood from Toronto last week to go on duty in Bruce County. Since the resignation of L. Censor Inspector White some months ago there has been no local liquor law enforcing officer here and it is expected that Constable Blood will be kept on the job. Constable Blood is a British reservist, who has lived fifteen years in this country. He has a wife and son at Kitchener.

The Spring Assizes open here next Monday, March 13th, before Mr. Justice Orde. There will be no Grand Jury. Two jury cases and one non-jury case will be tried. Chesley Garage vs. Clark is an action to recover $1400, the price of tractor sold to defendant who alleges breach of warranty on the part of the plaintiff. Stanley vs. West Wawanosh Mutual Fire Insurance Co. is an action brought for the purpose of recovering loss and damage by fire under an insurance policy issued by the defendant company. The defendant claims misrepresentation on the part of the plaintiff and alleges the fire was caused by the willful act or procurement and connivance of said plaintiff. The only non-jury case is Anderson vs. County of Bruce Plaintiff claims $1200 damages to an automobile, the result of an accident alleged to be caused by an incompetent and defective culvert.

SCARLET FEVER

Like diphtheria, scarlet fever is "caught" by direct contact, and also by breathing in the air infected by the coughing and sneezing of sufferers.

The "peeling" in scarlet fever is not nearly as "catching" as the sore throat in the beginning of this disease.

Children with scarlet fever should be kept apart from others until the skin is clear and all discharges from the nose and ears have stopped.

There are mild forms of scarlet fever, the same as of diphtheria; but you can "catch" the disease severely and even fatally from a mild case.

Take no chances. A child with only a sore throat and slight symptoms may be the means of spreading dangerous infection.

Never neglect a sore throat. The discharges from the mouth or throat of a patient should be collected on suitable cloths and burned.

Destroy all the food taken from the sick room. Bedding, clothing and other exposed objects ought to be disinfected.

There is not much use in fumigating the sick room after the recovery of a scarlet fever patient. But plenty of soap and water—and elbow grease—should be used.

And nature's fumigators—sunshine and fresh air—should be called in to do their most blessed work. There is nothing in all those yarns about catching scarlet fever by sleeping in a room where somebody had the disease several generations ago.

TOIL

He longed to find the road to fame. But not a highway bore that name. He thought to glory there must be A level path that he should see; But every road to which he came Under a terrifying name. He never thought that fame might lurk Along the dreary path called Work. He never thought to go and see What marked the road called Industry. Because it seemed so rough and high He passed the road of Service by. Yet had he taken either way He might have come to fame some day.

CANADIAN FARM VALUES

The average value of the occupied farm lands of Canada which included both improved and unimproved land together with dwelling houses, barns, stables and other farm buildings, is returned to the bureau statistics as $60 per acre as compared with $48 in 1920, 46 in 1919, $41 in 1918, $38 in 1917, $36 in 1916, and $35 in 1915. By provinces the value for 1921 is highest in British Columbia, $122. In other provinces the average value of farm lands per acre are reported as follows: Ontario $53; Quebec $59; Prince Edward Island $35; Nova Scotia and Manitoba $35; Saskatchewan $29; New Brunswick and Alberta $28.

For the year 1920, the average wages of farm help were the highest on record. For 1921 the returns show a very substantial reduction. For the whole of Canada the average wages of farm helpers during the summer season of 1921 were for men $67 and for women $42, including board; and average value of which was $22 per month for men and $18 for women. In 1920 the corresponding averages were $86 for men, including board value $30.

Not only do the average values for all descriptions of farm live stock show an extraordinary decrease as compared with 1920, but they are also below the values which were ruling before the war. For horses the values are the lowest on record since these annual returns were begun in 1909. For Canada as a whole horses under one year of age average $38, as against $49 in 1920; horses one year to under three years $79 against $102, and horses three years old and over, $123, as against $151.

Cattle under one year are $12 as against $20; cattle one to three yrs $26 against $37. For all descriptions the average value per head for Canada is, for horses $38 as against $106 in 1920; for milch cows $51 as against $80; for other cattle $28 as against $47; for all cattle $37 as against $59; for sheep $6 as against $10 and for swine $14 as against $23. For swine per 100 lb live weight the average is $10 as against $15 in 1920. The per capita values are the lowest of any during the last seven years, 1915 to 1921, except that for swine, the value in 1915 was $14 as in 1921.

A CLOSE CALL

Guelph, March 7.—To be washed under a ninety foot culvert by the swift waters of a creek which crosses under the roadway on Waterloo Ave., and to lie there for over 20 minutes before being forced out on the opposite side of the underground passage, was the experience of Fred Peers, eight year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Peers, 166 Waterloo Ave. Although apparently lifeless when taken out of the water by Wm. Wornton, a member of the rescue party, the little lad was brought around by doctors, who worked over him for more than an hour, and night he was resting nicely at his home, and his complete recovery seems assured. The accident happened about four o'clock this afternoon when accompanied by two playmates he was amusing himself with his little Spaniel dog on the shore of the creek. He lost his balance and fell in, and before his companion could raise an alarm had disappeared from view. Chief Knighton and three members of the Fire Department were soon on the scene, and with a number of other citizens, worked in the muddy water for 20 minutes before they succeeded in releasing the boy's body from a small barricade of brush and wood onto which he had been washed in the centre of the culvert. The speed of the water was so great that members of the rescue party were unable to make their way under the culvert, but by placing a log on the end of a rope and sending it down the stream they were able to release the lad from the obstacle on which he was anchored.

ANOTHER CURE DISCOVERED

(New York Times)
A tale that is told—affidavits go with it if required—is of a woman who, while endeavoring to cure herself of influenza, found herself a victim of obstinate insomnia. Hearing of this, her doctor gave her a tablet to take. This she put on a table close to her bed, and when, as had become her sad habit, sleep would not come, she reached out in the darkness found the tablet, and took it.

A few minutes later she went to sleep, and so continued till morning when she awoke much refreshed. But then she saw the hypnotic disk was still on the table, although missing therefrom a small porcelain button that she remembered as having been there the night before.

The story illustrates again the powers of faith and imagination.

CATALOG TIME

Where now the winds of March are blowing the garden sassa will soon be growing. My muse shall sing man's yearly need for onion sets and spinach seeds, shall sing likewise that gay deceiver which stimulates our garden fever, the subtle seedman's catalog whose charms our better judgement fog. Its pictured boots and peas and chard were never grown in my back yard. My radishes are not so red, my pumpkins not so widely spread, my lettuce refuse to head. The seedman is an optimist and loves the brighter side. I wait. He does not show in colored plate the woolly worms that lie in wait. No dark brown spots like mine are seen on his prolific green-pot bean. And yet for planting all these I love that yearly catalog. I hail with joy each harmless table and plant new squashes for my table. Ror though my cukes be bitter things, my cabbage full of worms, by jings, and all my snap beans full of strings, still to my heart the brown cart calls, and I hear summer springs and falls shall find my legs in overalls; shall find me spading loam and sand with seven blisters on my hand.

TRAGIC END OF GODERICH TAILOR

Goderich Star: To walk into Brophy Bros' undertaking establishment last Friday morning and tell Mr. Brophy that he had come to die, was what Mr. William Johnston did, after taking a dose of Paris green. Mr. Brophy asked what was wrong and Mr. Johnston told him what he had done. The doctor was immediately called for and used a stomach pump and restoratives and had Mr. Johnston removed to the hospital. He died the same night. Mr. Johnston was in his 78th year, and had lived in Goderich since he was a boy working for practically all the local tailors at one time or another.

MAKING THE ROADS EASY

J. Peter Purvis has no bus that he can call his own; yet he is such a lucky cuss—he's in a class alone. Car owners coil at his abode and take him for a ride; they haul him up and down the road all o'er the country-side.

Oh, other men may h't the pike until the cows go dry, but all his neighbors seem to like haul this Purvis guy. I asked this Peter, man of brains "Why don't you own a car?" He said "My neighbors all have wains, and that is better far; they buy the gas and oil and grease, pay all bills, by fish, and I have most abundant peace and all the rides I wish. Why should I spend my hard earned bones to buy a choo-choo car, when I can ride with William Jones, who hauls me near and far? Why should I go in debt, I pray, to buy a whizz-whizz cart, when I can ride with Joseph Jay till his bus falls apart?"

I said, "I do not understand just how you work your graft; men toil on foot throughout the land, I see them fore and aft; yet no one offers them a ride, as they go drilling on, while you ride forth in pomp and pride—it's queer, so help me John. Why do the chauffeurs stop their boats, inviting you to ride, when other men who've lost their goats, art evermore denied?"

"It is no mystery," says Pete, "I have no lucky star; I merely make some comment sweet about the driver's car. 'Well, this is luxury,' I say when I have climbed aboard, 'I wish that I, some day, could such a car afford.' I make a few remarks like that i grave and earnest tones, and so I ride with Jinks and Jones. All drivers like to haul a man that talks along that line, whi sings the praises of the van as something extra fine."

You'll let him walk.

We all would smooth the path we tread by saying pleasant things; I'm sure we never forge ahead by heaving caustic fire. This morn I praised my neighbor's cow, said she was as fine as silk; and he is bringing me just now three quarts of kickless milk. I praised the tailor for his skill in making clothes for gents, and when I went to pay his bill he knocked off fifty cents. I say kind things to every lad, to every chap I know, and so, in all this widespread grade I think I have no foe.

In younger days I was a fool who trained with flippancy, sparks, and I indulged in ridicule and venomous marks. I jeered at all the village hicks and likened them to cheese, and I was always dodging bricks and climbing popular trees.

But now I wear a trenchant smile that keeps my face ajar; and some one, every little while, hands me a fresh cigar. The world has little of distress, and life is slick as grease; my ways are ways of pleasantness and all my paths are peace.
