HOW three drops of whiskey ter's worth of chicken yesterday, was told The Ontario this morning by a North Park Street resident. He has five early birds about three weeks old and yesterday they were caught in the rain and ready to hand in their checks. But the bird fancier would not let them drop away so easily, so he carefully put a d:op of whiskey in a spoon, filling it up with buttermilk. He gave the fine little bunch of fluff a drink around until the contents of the spoon was gone, Then the birds were put in a box. An hour later the same dose was given the quintette and later the wee deoch an' doris was repeated. After this, well they didn't go to roost but they stood up like well chickens and walked into some food the owner placed before them.
