Anecdotal.

A certain wealthy benefactor of Harvard humorously complained of Pre-sident Eliot's treatment. "He comes to me," he said, "for my money and my advice; and, like the women in the Scripture, the one is taken and the other left." Nothing verbal could be much more delicious than Joseph H. Choate's definition of the dinners of the New England Society of New York as "Those gatherings of an unhappy company of pilgrims who meet annually at Deimonico's to drown the sorrows and sufferings of their ancestors in the flowing bowl, and to contemplate their own virtues in the mirror of history." "That was an excellent discourse you delivered last Sunday," remarked a veteran minister of the gospel to rising young preacher, "but I would hardly call it a sermon." "Why not, doctor?" demanded the other. "Because you had no text." "Don't you call such a discourse a sermon unless it has a "Certainly not," "You have read the Sermon on the Mount, have you not?" "Many, many times." "Well, it has no text." "On the contrary, my dear young friend," said the veteran,

"it is composed entirely, of texts." The speech in the House of Lords of the Bishop of Hereford on the sub-ject of gambling recalls a story told of Bishop Potter, of New York, The bishop, traveling through Louisiana some years ago, addressed inquiries to his fellow-passengers with a view to obtaining information regarding the orchards and fruit interests of the State. "Do you raise pears in Louisiana?" inquired the bishop. "We do," replied the Louisianian, who was a better authority on poker than on horticulture, "if we have threes

She was talking to him when she was of fered a famous German salad. It was handed on her right and the Kaiser was on her left, which put her in a predicament. She did not dare turn her face from the emperor to help herself to the salad. The situation was too much for her. The emperor, seeing the condition at a glance, looked at her for an instant and laughed, as he said: "A Kaiser can wait, but a salad" can not." George Moore, the author and dramatist, once had a play accepted at the Odeon in Paris. At the same time an adaptation of "Othello" was being rehearsed there. One day Mr. Moore called to see the manager of the Odeon. The door-keeper did not know him, and asked for his name and business. "I am the English author whose play has been accepted here," said Mr. Moore; "I wish to see manager." The door-keeper went into the manager's room and said: "There's an English gentleman at the door who says that you have just accepted his play, and wants to see you." "Quite right," said the manager; "show him in. M. Shakespeare, without doubt." It is said that once, when the late Dr. Tanner, the Irish M.P., had asked in the House whether the Duke of Cambridge had resigned Major Jones of Penzance, was so outraged that he challenged Dr. Tanner to a duel, and the following telegraphic correspondence took place:

"In reply to your despicable question chout the Duke of Cambridge 1. "In reply to your despicable questions about the Duke of Cambridge, I designate you a coward. Delighted to give you satisfaction across the water. Pistols." To which Dr. Tanner at once replied: "Wire received. Will meet you -morrow in Constantinople, under the Tower of Galata, midnight. Being challenged, prefer torpedoes. Bring

"I am now about to undertake a feat," said he, "in which I shall need the use of a pint flask of whiskey." There was dead silence. "Will some gentleman in the audience favor me with a pint of whiskey?" There was no response and the conjurer began to look blank.
"Surely," he continued, "in a South-Eastern prohibition town I ought not to have to ask a second time for such a thing. I give my word I will return it intact. Is there no-"Stranger," said a tall, gaunt man, as he rose slowly from a front seat, "wouldn't a quart flask do as well?" "Why, certainly! Magistrate: "Just so. Well, taking into account your antecedents, and seeing that you come of a refined family, you may now consider yourself re-fined-spelling with an r-e and a hyphen."-"Pick-me-up."

A Clerical Wit.

After a church conference held a few days ago, two brother ministers had friendly tilt, regarding the meaning of certain passage in one of Shake a certain passage in one of Shakespeare's plays. They could not come to an understanding, and one of them remarked jokingly: "Oh, well, brother, the other. "Then you can ask him about it," was the quick reply.

The pheasant, everybody knows, is a non-aquatic bird; therefore Professor Lloyd Morgan's observation that newly hatched birds of the age of thirty hours swim easily, show apt leg move-ments and exhibit few signs of distress, is of singular interest. Is this swimming habit a throw back or reversion to an antecedent state in the history of this land-living species, or is it to be regarded as an example of a direct and sudden adaptation to a hew environment? Doubtless Professor Lloyd Morgan will debate this question at length. It certainly has an
