PRESIDENT MCKINLEY SHOT

Cowardly Attempt by an Anarchist to take His Life. Condition Critical but Hope Entertained for His Recovery. Words of Sympathy.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 6.—President McKinley was shot and seriously wounded by a would-be assassin while holding a reception in the Temple of Music at the Pan-American this afternoon.

It was a few moments after 4 p. m., that the cowardly attack was made just after the daily organ recitals in the Temple of Music.

The President, though well guarded by United States secret service detectives, was fully exposed to the attack. He stood at the edge of the raised dais upon which stands the grand pipe organ at the east side of the structure. Throngs of people crowded in at the various entrances to see the chief executive and, if possible, clasp his hand.

The good natured mob every minute swelled and multiplied. The President was in a cheerful mood and was enjoying to the full the hearty evidences of good will which everywhere met his gaze. Upon his right stood John G. Milburn, of Buffalo, president of the Pan-American Exposition, chatting to him especially persons of note who approached. Upon the President's left stood Mr. Cortelyou. A medium-sized man of ordinary appearance and plainly dressed in black, approached as if to greet the President.

Both Secretary Cortelyou and President Milburn noticed that the man's hand was swathed in a bandage or handkerchief. He worked his way amid the stress of people up to the edge of the dais until he was within two feet of the President.

President McKinley smiled, bowed and extended his hand in that spirit of geniality the American people so well know, when suddenly the sharp crack of a revolver rang out loud and clear above the hum of voices, the shuffling of feet and waves of applause. The President stood stock still, a look of hesitancy, almost of bewilderment, on his face. Then he retreated a step, while a pallor began to steal over his features. The multitude, only partially aware that something serious had happened, paused in the silence of surprise, while necks were craned and all eyes turned as one toward the rostrum.

Then came a commotion. Three men threw themselves forward as with one impulse, and sprang towards the would-be assassin. Two of them were United States Secret Service men, whose duty it was to guard against just such a calamity. The third was a bystander, a negro. The trio hurled themselves upon the assailant. In a twinkling he was borne to the ground, his weapon wrenched from his grasp, and he was pinioned down before the vast multitude began to realize what had happened. A rumour arose, spread and swelled to pandemonium. For a moment the confusion was terrible.

After the first shock of the assassin's shot, the President retreated a step; then as the detectives leaped upon his assailant, he turned, walked steadily to a chair and seated himself, at the same time removing his hat and bowing his head in his hands. In an instant Secretary Cortelyou and President Milburn were at his side. His waistcoat was hurriedly opened, the President meanwhile admonishing those about him to remain calm, and telling them not to be alarmed.

"But you are wounded," cried his secretary, "let me examine."

"No, I think not," answered the President. "I am not badly hurt, I assure you."

Nevertheless his outer garments were hastily loosened and when a trickling stream of crimson was seen to wend its way down his breast, spreading its tell-tale stain over the lines, the worst fears were confirmed. A force of exposition guards were on the scene by this time and an effort was made to clear the building. By this time the crush was terrific. Spectators crowded down the stairways from the galleries, the crowd on the floor surged forward toward the rostrum, while despite the strenuous efforts of police and guards the throng without struggled madly to obtain admission.

The President's assailant in the meantime had been hustled to the rear of the building by exposition guards, where he was turned over to Superintendent Bull, of the Buffalo police department, who took him to No. 13 police station, and later to crowd in the Temple of Music had been dispersed sufficiently, the President was removed in the automobile ambulance and taken to the exposition hospital, where an examination was made. The best medical skill was summoned, and within a brief period several of Buffalo's best known practitioners were at the patient's side.

The President retained the full exercise of his faculties until placed on the operating table and subjected to an anesthetic. Upon the first examination it was ascertained that one bullet had taken effect in the right breast just below the nipple, causing a comparatively harmless wound.

The other took effect in the abdomen, four inches below the left nipple, four inches to the left of the navel, and about on a level with it.

Upon arrival at the exposition hospital the second bullet was probed for. The incision was hastily closed, and after a brief and hasty consultation it was decided to remove the patient to the home of President Milburn. Arriving there, all persons outside the medical attendants, nurses and the officials immediately connected were excluded, and the task of probing for the bullet which had lodged in the abdomen was begun by Dr. Parks.

When the news was telephoned to the home of President Milburn, where Mrs. McKinley was resting, immediate steps were taken to spare her the shock of a premature statement of the occurrence before the true condition of the President should be ascertained. Guards were stationed about the residence to approach the house. When it was decided to remove the President from the exposition hospital to the Milburn residence the news was broken to Mrs. McKinley. She bore the shock remarkably well. The news had in the meantime been spread broadcast by the newspapers. Like wildfire it spread from mouth to mouth. The crowd surged down toward police headquarters. They were met by a strong cordon of police, drawn across the pavement. In a few minutes the crowd swelled to thousands. Some one raised the cry "Lynch him!" Like a flash the cry was taken up. The situation was becoming critical, when suddenly the big doors were flung open and a squad of reserve advanced with solid front drove the crowd back from the curb, then across the street and to the station. By this time there were probably 50,000 people assembled in the vicinity of Pearl, Seneca and Erie streets and the Terrace. The crowd did not move until the police had cleared the entire street in front of police headquarters.

THE ASSASSIN.

The prisoner at first proved very communicative. He first gave his name as Fried Nieman, said his home was in Detroit, Mich., and that he had been in Buffalo about a week. He said he had been boarding at a place in Broadway. Later this place was located at John Nowak's saloon, a saloon at No. 1087 Broadway. Nowak said he knew very little about his guest. He came there, he declared, last Saturday, saying he had come to see the Pan-American and said his home was in Toledo. He had been alone at all times about Nowak's place and had no visitors. In his room was found a small travelling bag of cheap make. It contained an empty cartridge box and a few clothes.

THE ASSASSIN'S PUNISHMENT.

New York, Sept. 6.—President McKinley's recovery would mean that his would-be assassin could be confined in prison for ten years, the maximum penalty under the penal code of New York state.

BUFFALO, Sept. 8.—Interest in the President's condition across the Canadian border is so great that the associated press was asked to furnish a bulletin this morning to be read in the churches of Quebec and Montreal. Many requests of a similar character came direct to Secretary Cortelyou from different parts of the United States and all over the world in fact have fairly overwhelmed Secretary Cortelyou. One of the most touching was from Madam Laboi, wife of Maitre Laboi who defended Dreyfus in his famous trial.

BUFFALO, Sept. 8.—Mrs. McKinley continues to bear up bravely. Members of the cabinet are doing everything in their power to prevent the sensational undoubtedly craves notoriety and because his fellow anarchists throughout the country love it. They do not desire to place any details in the path of the authorities who are laboring to unravel the plot if any plot existed.

FROM LORD MINTO.

QUEBEC, Sept. 8.—His Excellency, Lord Minto, yesterday sent the following message to Mrs. McKinley: Am deeply grieved to hear of the dastardly attempt made upon the President's life. Please accept my sympathy. Rejoice to hear that the accounts today are satisfactory.
