Trailing the Editors

Marian took a deep breath as she entered the elevator and was shot up to the editorial rooms of one of New York's most prosperous daily newspapers.

"Who do you want to see?" demanded the boy at the gate, looking at her with the patronizing, preoccupied contempt of his officious tribe.

"The editor," said Marian.

"City, Sunday, managing or editor-in-chief?" asked the youth.

"The Sunday editor, I think," returned Marian, concluding that her article would be best suited to the Sunday feature pages.

"Your card?" added the boy.

A few minutes later, Marian stood in the presence of a slim young man, who regarded her coldly through his spectacles. His was the unsympathetic eye of the rejector of countless manuscripts. He was the wall of ice in the pathway of eager contributors, the pitiless critic of the uninitiated.

"Well?" he snapped.

"I have an article here that I'm sure you'll find interesting," began Marian. "It's the true account of a young woman's effort to find work in New York." She produced "Two Weeks in the Jungle" and laid it on the editor's desk.

"You may leave it with me," answered the man. "I'll get around to it as soon as I can—but it may take three or four weeks. I'm swamped with work right now. I'll pass on it and let you know. Your address?"

"I finished, his pencil poised above a writing pad.

"I can't leave it that long," faltered Marian, appalled at the thought of waiting three or four weeks for a decision.

"All right, take it somewhere else," said the editor curtly, handing the manuscript back to her and resuming his rummaging in the chaos of papers on his desk. Taken aback by the abrupt words, Marian picked up her story and started crestfallen for the door.

"You might try it on the Chronicle, right across the street," said the Sunday editor. "They're making a big fuss over unemployment right now. Ask for Jones, the managing editor. Tell him I sent you."

"Thank you very much," answered Marian. The other's coldness had not given promise of any such sympathetic remark as his final words contained.

She dodged across the confusion of the street. As luck would have it, Jones of the Chronicle was in less harsh a mood than ordinarily. One of his staff had "beaten" the town on an important development of a murder mystery that day and his paper, a struggling afternoon sheet, had furnished Grub Street with an exhibition of enterprise that had startled some of its rivals. His eye travelled with trained rapidity down the written pages. Marian waited for his decision like a criminal at the bar.

Before she had time to consider she had been rushed into the photographer's room and her picture taken.

"Pretty good stuff," commented the editor. For a moment he gazed in silence at Marian. "Got a picture of yourself?" he demanded.

"Oh, I wouldn't think of having my picture published," protested Marian. "Besides, if you publish this article, I want it to go under an assumed name."

"Nonsense!" interrupted the editor. "Boy!" he yelled. An office urchin came dashing into the office. "Boy, send one of the photographers in here." Presently a young man entered. The editor said to him: "Take a photograph of Miss Winthrop here, and have a two-column cut made for tomorrow's paper. What's your address, Miss Winthrop?" he added, turning to Marian. "I'll mail you a check for this stuff to-morrow at space rates."

With such swift action had the editor overridden Marian's protest that before she had time to consider, she had been rushed into the photographer's room and her picture was taken.

"Well," she murmured, on reaching the street, with mingled feelings of happiness and regret over her first acceptance from an editor, "I wonder how big that check is going to be?"

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Gentlemen.—Last August my horse was badly cut in eleven places by a barbed wire fence. Three of the cuts, (small ones) healed soon, but the others became foul and rotten, and though I tried many kinds of medicine they had no beneficial result. At last a doctor advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT and in four weeks time every sore was healed and the hair has grown over each one in fine condition. The Liniment is certainly wonderful in its working.

Fred Merkle.

Red McGhee

Red McGhee says: Not long ago the world set back an' called Fred Merkle first prize. "Jack"—the kind with big, long ears. He pulled a big world series home, caused 30,000 fans to groan—some shed tears. Poor Fred was sure in de e p disgrace when he forgot to touch that base—it sealed the Giant's doom. The wise one's whispered: "Bye, bye, Fred, your playin' days are done." Some said, "Go hunt an' ivory tumb."

His little lapse of foot an' brain was talked about on stage an' train, from pulpits an' at home. Sky pilots traced great lessons from an' voderveellans made jokes 'bout Merkle's ivory dome. But Muggs McGraw—he just stood pat. He knew that Fred could field an' bat, an' make up for his slip. Soon Merkle's random's boots an' jeans at Fred gave way to shorts an' cheers—his comeback was a pip.

He's mighty careful of his feet. There ain't much chances that he'll repeat the famous bull he made. The way he's covey'n' first base makes stars like those of 'Chance an' 'Chase grow dim an' start to fade. His stick work's pretty timely, too. He bangs 'em for a base or two to bring the runners in. The fans won't ever quite forget, but they'll forgive, it's safe to bet, the Merkle Mental Sin.

It is likely that military and Mexican features will appear in autumn styles.

LONDON, July 17.

The British Admiralty Court to-day found the British steamer Ince more responsible for the collision of June 17th, with the German liner Kaiser William II., just before the liner left Southampton for New York. The Judge in giving his decision, said he found the Ince more had made a mistake in giving a signal that she had stopped in a fog, when as a matter of fact she had not stopped. This, he said, had misled those on board the Kaiser, and had caused the collision, which resulted in considerable damage to the German ship.

De Witt Cairns on Monday.

The entrance and exit of the Nickel Theatre have been very prettily decorated in honour of the Duke of Connaught. During the holiday and yesterday the attendances were large, the building being filled to its utmost capacity at each performance. Manager Kiely has arranged another big entertainment for this evening. There will be a two reel feature picture: "The Feudists," a brilliant comedy drama by the Vitaphone artists in which the redoubtable John Bunny will appear. Lillian Walker, Flora Finch and Sidney Drew are also featured in this interesting play. "Seeds of Silver" is a strong social drama with the clever artist Hobart Bosworth in the leading character. "Cross Your Heart" is a splendid playlet with most effective situations. "Hattie's New Hat" is a sparkling comedy. There will also be a Pathe Weekly showing the latest events in the world abroad. Etta Gardner farewell this week, her song being "Down in Chatagouna." Monday, De Witt C. Cairns, the wonderful baritone, will be heard for the first time. Success in the States.

Mr. Frederick G. Ebsary was born at St. John's, his parents being Mark Ebsary and Jessie Parnel Ebsary. After a brief term at the Buchanan Street School, he went to work at the early age of twelve, as errand boy and helper. At 16, he was apprenticed out to a mason builder.

Two years later he left St. John's to complete his apprenticeship in the city of New York, which accomplished, he took up the fireproofing business, first as a mechanic and then as a foreman with the United States Gypsum Company. His ability and zeal were quickly recognized by his employers, and in time they entered into a construction contract with him, which, in the course of six years, proved to be sufficiently remunerative to enable him to accumulate enough to start the business of the Ebsary Fireproofing and Gypsum Block Company, of which he became the President.

This Company has undertaken some of the largest fireproofing contracts in the United States and Canada, including the Royal Bank Building, at Toronto, the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, at Montreal, the Fort Garry Hotel, at Winnipeg, and the Macdonald Hotel, at Edmonton.

Mr. Ebsary is but thirty-seven years of age, with a future of great promise before him.

EAST, WEST, SOUTH, NORTH

Motorists may come and go different directions, but their tire wants are all the same. Sooner or later every motorist encounters the obstacles which lead other motorists to seek and find the one solution.

ANTI-SKIDDING

The "buttoned" tires having failed to deliver, the big corrugation tire is selected. The series of "V's" grip the road like a traction engine, each "V" clearing the road for the next "V" to work upon.

NO PUNCTURES

The "buttoned" tires having failed to prevent punctures, the big corrugation tire is selected. The inch high anti-skid tread keeps nails, etc., away from the "puncturable" tread proper of a tire.

MILEAGE PLUS SAFETY

The "buttoned" tires having failed to keep up continuously, the big corrugation tire is selected. It set the record in 1912 of making the first and only Canadian Transcontinental trip.
