

United Fishermen's Movement Spreading.

Executive Committee to Meet Government.

Message to Hon. W. F. Coaker and His Reply--Comment Thereon.

The Executive Committee of the United Fishermen, accompanied by their counsel, Mr. Morris, K.C., will meet the Committee of Council (the Government) this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The chief object of the meeting, will be the presentation of a memorial, asking co-operation by the Government in the creation of a Fish Trust with powers to sell fish now held by fishermen, to make advances thereon to the extent of current prices, and to sell and ship the fish for the benefit of the present owners, paying them the net profits. The Government is also to be asked to guarantee the prices, so far as the same cannot be obtained on the usual commercial market. Memorials referring to taxation, especially the export tax on fish, and to fish marketing, will also be presented, but, it is understood, will not be discussed (except perhaps the export fish tax), as the main object of the meeting is the matter of the Fish Trust. On Saturday afternoon the following message was sent to Hon. W. F. Coaker.

November 11, 1922.
To Hon. W. F. Coaker, Port Union.
By their consent, the Government will receive United Fishermen's Committee on Monday next, at four p.m., to receive and consider memorial asking Government to appoint one person to act with another appointed as a Fish Trust to acquire, store and sell locally or foreign fish now held by fishermen, to advance current prices in fish when received, and to pay net profits after realization to fishermen in proportion to quantity and quality of fish sold into Trust by them, with power to borrow money on warehouse receipts and shipping documents and upon Government guarantee of amount security. Your presence as Minister of Marine and Fisheries is urgently requested by all.

and as senior member for Bonaville Bay where our movement began, you are especially urged by us to be present, and to support our movement.

JESSE WINSOR,
Chairman of Committee.

MR. COAKER'S REPLY.
The following message was received Saturday night from Mr. Coaker:
Port Union, Nov. 11.
To Capt. Jesse Winsor.
"Government will give necessary consideration your proposal. What they decide will likely meet my approval. There may be something workable develop from this proposal. Sorry I cannot go to St. John's. Just arrived here from there. Will have hands full coming week preparing for Convention, and getting cargo ready for 'Kriton.' We have now all our dealers fish in and have satisfied them re prices."

W. F. COAKER.

PERTINENT QUERY.
Does the first sentence above mean that the Government will decide as Coaker approves, or that Coaker will approve as they decide? Will he order or obey? If something workable might result from the proposal, why does he not come here to help make it so? Oh, he's preparing for the Convention, and for the sailing of the S.S. "Kriton;" that is, he's preparing to talk instead of being here to do, and he is engaged as a merchant in buying fish instead of as a Charley Jack in selling fish. He has, in truth, "turned his coat." The price of fish is no longer what Coaker makes it, but what the fishermen make it without his aid, in face of his opposition. Mr. Coaker was here on Friday, and left by special train precisely at the hour when the United Fishermen's meeting opened. Why didn't he attend?

The Climax.

(Twillingate Sun.)

In other columns, we give resolutions passed by the United Fishermen from Bonaville Bay. Viewing the subject from any angle we only come to one conclusion, that retrenchment is the only cure to bring back a healthy condition and a reduction in duties will encourage the suppliers to supply more freely where there can be no complaint to a larger degree, the many who depend on someone to keep moving in gaining a decent wage and be in a position to save a little to enlarge their interests. No one wants unrest and disturbances but when the earnings of the people are kept back by fraud and the market there is a loose coin in the market which had better be made scarce as it is too late and before the bad harvest through the result of over-catchment. If the people clamour for relief, why not an early settlement be made so as to avoid trouble. Overhaul, as a rule, are very painful, enduring and self-sacrificing. The patience does not satisfy the needs of the people, although they have waited so long for promises to be fulfilled.

Believing the destitute does not believe the ruling power of the dollar to those who might be granted some try out an occasional dollar of molasses. Take away the corn of the people in taxes and giving back in relief does not satisfy the clamorous who have been drawn down through negligence on the part of the rulers.

The young are to be kept in the country and prosperity again be a community a clearing of the tangles and begin, or no one will stay here, to wonder how well they like their native land.

Malays and Burmans Friendly to Lone Traveller.

RANGOON, (Associated Press).—Charles W. Blythe, an Englishman who is journeying on foot from Singapore to Calais, France and London, recently arrived in Rangoon and is now on his way to Calcutta. He intends to pursue his way through northern India, Baluchistan and Persia to St. Petersburg, where he will follow the Dnieper to its source and make his way through Asia Minor and Europe. He hopes to arrive in England by the end of 1923. Mr. Blythe, who has already covered 2,100 miles of his trip, thinks that his last 200 miles in Siam constituted as difficult a country as he shall ever encounter. He carries no firearms or weapons of any kind, and has not yet had need of any. His pack weighs from 20 to 40 pounds and consists of clothing, food, maps, notebooks and simple camp utensils. Malays and Burmans, the traveler says, are the most friendly people he has encountered so far. The Siamese he ranks last, although none of them have been definitely unfriendly.

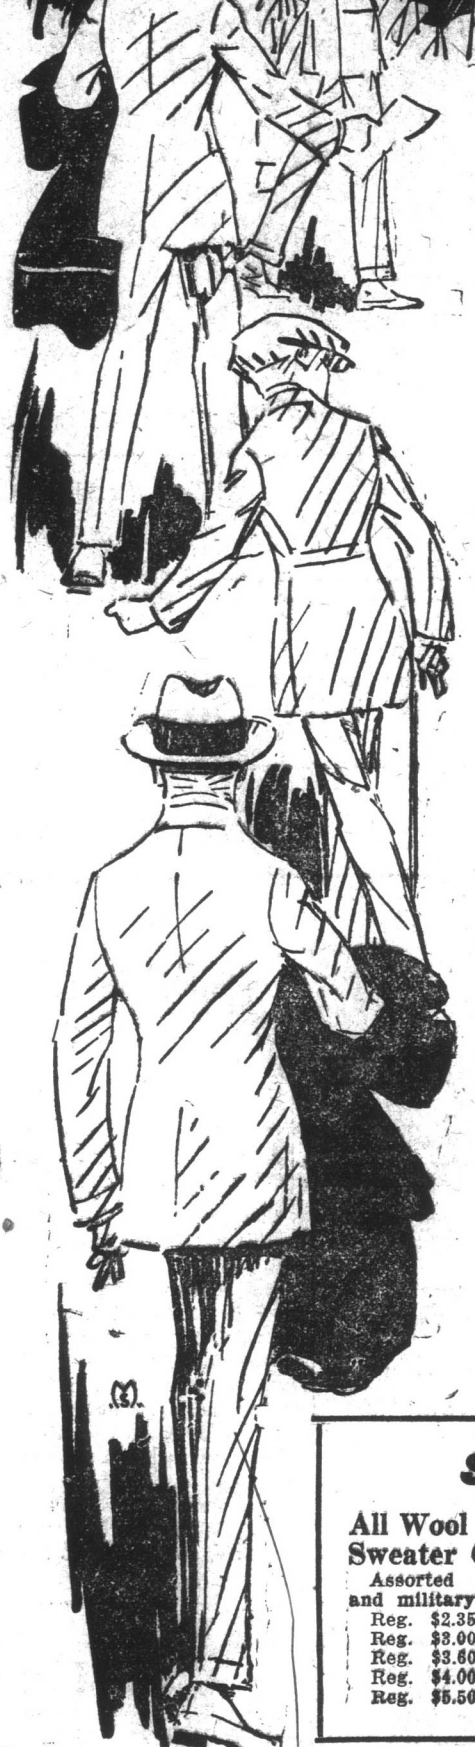

SOME ADVENTURES DESCRIBED.
Describing some of the adventures he has had since leaving Singapore last May, Mr. Blythe says, in part: "I wished to traverse Siam with all possible speed. From Kuen Nung my troubles commenced. Roads in the interior of Siam are nonexistent. Even cartrroads are termed by courtesy. For two days I travelled by earth paths, sleeping in farmers' houses, until I reached Patalung, which is a railway town not far from the coast. The place being infested with mosquitoes, I requested the station master to allow me to sleep in the waiting-room which request he granted. Leaving Patalung I entered the jungle again, although farms and villages were frequent. All this time I was guiding myself northward by the sun, every day or two tacking across to the railroad in order to keep the direction. There was but little fear of losing my way as the mountains ran parallel to the sea, leaving between a strip of plain, varying from ten to 40 miles in width. The large villages are located between the coast and the railway."

THE ELEMENTS INTERFERED.
"It was remarkable that I encountered no wild animals and very few snakes, which sometimes I killed and sometimes avoided. The natives were generally friendly enough, although our intercourse was limited owing to my defective Siamese vocabulary. Some 40 miles north of Chumphon, I was very puzzled to account for the fact that large expanses of the hillsides were cleared and used as grazing for cattle, as I had not credited the Siamese with sufficient energy to clear large areas of hill jungle. I was told that some 60 years ago a terrific tempest swept across the isthmus of Kra and destroyed all the vegetation. From Prechnap Kirikan the country became Siamese of the picture books—pagodas perched on seemingly inaccessible crags, natives clad in brilliant-colored clothing; quaint ox-carts; priests and monks and monasteries; herds of vicious-looking water buffaloes; and rice fields everywhere. I entered Bangkok July 23, exactly two months after leaving Singapore. Bangkok, like most large towns of the East, is a curious mixture of West and East, the old and the new. Palatial smiling, winding lanes lead from spacious boulevards. Pagodas stand at street's throw from churches."

The Royal Stores, Limited

MASSIVE WALLS OF CITY.
"The old walls of Bangkok are a fine example of the fortifications as understood by the Oriental nations. Miles in length, averaging 30 feet in height by some 20 in thickness and built of massive blocks of granite, they present a fine spectacle. The government houses are built of stone and are imposing structures. About half a dozen of the far-famed white elephants are housed there. The tramway service in Bangkok is the most comfortable of all I have tested in Asia. At Ban Dara, my northern most limit in Siam, I turned southwest and arrived in a relatively large town named Sawankaloke. While talking with the schoolmaster he jokingly remarked that I was a spy. The local chief of police immediately became enamored with the idea, and I spent an uncomfortable 30 minutes relieving his doubts."

Cancer is not Inherited.

New York, Nov. 12.—According to a statement issued by the American Society for the Control of Cancer, this disease is not thought to be inherited in the human race; nor is it a blood disease, or contagious.
"A patient with cancer is no more dangerous to those around him than a patient with a broken arm," says the statement. "Just when and how a cancer starts no one knows accurately, but a great deal is known about its progress after it has started. It spreads from the site of its beginning and destroys the healthy tissues of the body as it goes. It sends forth living cells which start other cancers in other parts of the body. It gradually reduces its victim to such a condition that nothing whatever can be done for him."
"If cancer is taken in its early stages the patient has plenty of chances for a cure. The best of these chances are at the very start, before the lump, the pre-cancerous wart, ulcer or bruise has become a genuine cancer, but there are still good chances even after it has become a cancer, if the disease is taken before the cancer begins to spread. After spreading has begun the patient's outlook is dark as the odds slowly mount up against him until they are a hundred to one. At the start the odds in favor of the patient are fully as great."
