SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

DRESS SUITS AND CHRISTMAS SHOPPING. Did you ever hear the story of the man whose wife was helping him into his dress suit? She was half way dressed when she heard the demands on her began: "See if you can button this blamed collar! I can't. Where are my cuff buttons? Where the blazes did you put the shirt studs? You'll have to get me another collar—you've made such a mess of this. I wouldn't wear it to a dog fight." I laid a clean handkerchief there not two minutes ago. Oh well, I don't know who put that collar on it. I didn't.

Finally she gets him dressed. He smiles himself, into his coat and stands admiring himself, then he turns and catches sight of his wife still half way dressed.

"Great Scott," he exclaims, "here I am all dressed and you've still got on that kimona thing you had on half an hour ago. What have you been doing with yourself all this time?"

I love that story.

And I often think of it.

Of Course His Is Easy!

I thought of it yesterday when I heard a man asking his wife why she didn't have her Christmas shopping done. "You've been down town three days," he pointed out to her and yet you tell me you have hardly bought a thing. What have you been doing all this time? I spent about an hour yesterday afternoon and got some of mine done. It's lucky men don't work the way women do, I'll say."

Now that man gives his wife a small sum every year with which she is supposed to buy gifts for the children, for his relatives and for hers. She wants her to get as much as she can. Can she do that by going into the first shop and buying whatever is offered. That's the way he does with the few gifts that he buys. He goes into a good shop and pays whatever price is asked. Of course his shopping is a simple thing.

Like a Picture Puzzle.

Here, on the contrary, is a much more intricate affair. She has a certain limited amount of money with which to buy a good many things. If one thing costs more than she expects she will have to change her plans and save somewhere else. The reason she goes shopping several times and comes home empty handed is simply that she is planning her campaign. If she finds Phillip's velocipede costs more than she thought it would, it will have to be his sole present from both father and mother, without the football she planned as a supplementary gift. On the other hand if she can get Mitchell's slippers at a sample shoe shop she will have enough left for stockings. And so forth and so on. Many a woman has come back almost empty handed and then come once more and done the bulk of her shopping in a single day, after the whole campaign has fallen into place like the last few pieces of a picture puzzle.

She Might Try His Way.

That isn't foolish time wasted, it's wise planning.

And the man who laughs at her or finds fault with her, or wants to know what she had been doing all this time reminds me of the man and the dress suit. Not quite as unreasonable and absurd but almost so.

A good dinner deserves a good cigarette, a bad dinner needs one. Let your choice be COB.

Automobiles Build Fortunes For Lucky Marylanders.

BALTIMORE—Twelve years ago the Pennsylvania Railroad gave an old bridge over the Susquehanna River at Havre de Grace to private interests: the building of a new bridge had made it, apparently, valueless. Automobiles ever since have been crossing the structure in increasing numbers, and the men who got the bridge for nothing in 1910 recently sold it to the State of Maryland for $885,000. And in the 12 years it was in their possession, they pocketed $70,000 in dividends, all in tolls charges collected from motor cars. When the new bridge made the old one of doubtful use, the railroad company offered it first to the state and then to the county, but without success. If no one accepted it, the company was obligated with the necessity of removing it, which would have been very expensive. So finally the company changed from a railroad bridge to a highway bridge, and considered itself lucky in finding a group of Maryland men who consented to accept the structure, which originally had cost $1,000,000, as a gift. The recipients set up $700 to organize a company, and the net returns from the bridge were $65,000. The state will continue to collect tolls until 1935, by

A Hot Letter From Pipe Smoker.

Three years ago my dear friend was complaining because I could not pipe tobacco that was worth a cent a pound. He immediately advised Edgewood. If I had a dollar I would have bought a pack of Edgewood. I have since bought several packs and I can tell you that it has been worth every cent. I have never had a pipe smoker who has not bought a pack of Edgewood. Both kinds pack so nicely that they will last for a long time. One 20c. bottle of FORD'S Ginger Wine makes nearly a gallon of ginger wine. Edgewood.
