British Parliament-The Budget.

London, April 24.—Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, intreduced the budget for the coming traduced the budget for the coming financial year in the House of Commons to day. The Chancellor estimated the expenditure for the current financial year at £91,464,000 and the revenue at £89,890,000, leaving a deficit of £1,574,000 due in part to a slight expected decrease of the revenue, but chiefly to the vast growth of expenditures not created by the Government, but through the Government would not propose to cover the deficit by encreaching upon the sinking fund devoted to the reduction of the national debt! He preferred to meet the deficit by the straightforward way of increased taxation. They had therefore resorted to the income tax, which it was proposed to increase by a

The Right Hon. G. J. Goschen, who was Chancellor of the Exchequer under Lord Salisbury's administration, said that he would refrain from criticising the budget, but he condoled with the Chancellor of the Exchequer in having to meet rising expenditures with falling revenue.

The Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock (Liberal-Unionist) said that he approved meeting the deficit by direct taxation. Other comments were made, generally favorable to the budget.

Col. Howard Vincent, referring to a dubious cable dispatch to the effect that President Cleveland proposed to abrogate the reciprocity treaties, concluded by the United States with certain foreign countries, asked Sir Edward Grey, Parliamentary under secretary for the Foreign Office, what foundation there was for the report. Sir Edward Grey replied that he had no information to that effect.

Thomas Sexton (anti-Parnellite) asked whether the attention of the Government had been directed to the Belfast riots; if so, what measures had been taken to preserve peace, and whether the speeches of the eminent politicians who had instigated the riots would be considered by the law officers of the crown. Similar conduct of the Orangemen on a previous occasion, Mr. Sexton added, had resulted in the killing of twenty people. The Belfast police had apparently made no effort to prevent the looting on Saturday night of the tavern kept by the Catholic Connolly. Would such negligence be tolerated by the Government?

In reply Mr. Asquith read the official report of the rioting in Belfast yesterday and Saturday. The facts related corresponded with those cited by Mr. Sexton and already published. As regards the speeches of the eminent politicians, as Mr. Sexton had designated Mr. Balfour and Lord Randolph Churchill, Mr. Asquith expressed the opinion that they had incurred a very heavy responsibility by using intemperate language directly calculated to incite the bitterest party strife. The Government had taken every possible step, he said, to prevent a recurrence of the deplorable demonstrations in Belfast and believed that further trouble would be averted.

New HAVEN, Conn., April 25.—For the first time in the history of Yale College a child has been born to a student actively pursuing studies in the university, and to make the event even more remarkable both the father and the mother are registered on the rolls as members of the same class. Ferdinand A. Hauselein, the father, entered Yale in the class of '92. The mother's maiden name was Helen Dawson, of Northampton, Mass. Soon after commencement last year Hauselein and Miss Dawson were married in Northampton. When college opened last Mass. Soon after commencement last year Hauselein and Miss Dawson were married in Northampton. When college opened last fall the husband and wife decided to take a post-graduate course in philosophy at the husband's alma mater, Yale. It was not until this college year that conservative Yale opened its doors to women in the post-graduate department, and Mrs. Hauselein was the first woman to apply for admission under the new rule. The little Hauselein, in addition to his other honors, wins the $500 class oup offered by the class of '92' to the first son born to any member of the class. Besides all this, he will be the eldest class boy ever reported at the first reunion of any Yale class. Speculation has been indulged in on the campus regarding the name that will be given the baby. In all names that have been suggested "Yale" figures prominently. It is thought that the corporation will vote to give the boy a complete free college course.

Peterboro, April 25.—On Sunday the body of Christopher Walker, ared about 70 years, who lived alone in a log house in Otombee, near the village of Keene, was found lying prone, the face kept from touching the floor by a rope, slip-noosed round the neck and tied to a beam above. Life had been extinct some time. The suicide was eccentric, as was shown by the methodical and charitable preparations made for his death. On Friday he came to town and purchased two Sunday school libraries and a number of Bibles. The libraries he presented to the Keene and Villiers Presbyterian Sunday schools and the Bibles to the children of several friends. He also presented sealed envelopes to the treasurer of the Presbyterian Church, Keene; to Rev. F. Andrews, minister, and to a niece, with instructions terian Church, Keenc, to Rev. F. Andrews, minister, and to a niece, with instructions not to open them till Monday. On being opened the first envelope contained $80 for home missions, the second $120 and the third a handsome sum. He spoke of making a journey for which the hoisting of a white flag on his cabin would be the signal. The flag was found flying Sunday morning and led to the discovery of the suicide.
