GIFTS TO MAID OF HONOR.

The generosity of the queen-mother were shown recently at the marriage of one of her maids of honor, Miss Sylvia Edwards, to Count Gleichen. Queen Alexandra's gift consisted of a superb diamond and pearl tiara, a brooch formed by the initial "E" sapphires, crossed by "A" in diamonds, the whole surmounted by a small diamond crown, and an Indian shawl, Among the other presents from royalty were a blue enamel and pearl ooch from the King and Queen, and in amethyst and diamond pendant was the gift of Princess Victoria, and two lovely whole-hoop rings, a diamond nd a ruby, came from the Queen of Spain, Princess Henry of Battenberg se a moonstone and diamond drop ndant for her gift to the bride, while a set of silver tea knives was sent from the Duchess of Albany. Prince and Princess Louise of Battenburg's gift consisted of a set of handsome gold and enamel salt cellars.

What Grain Growers Want. Mr. David Ross, representing the Strassburg Association, advocated Government ownership, operation and control of the Hudson Bay Railway. The deputation believed so, but were doubtful as to how it could be accomplished.

"There will be legislation making it impossible for elevators to be operated by buyers of grain," was the Pre-mier's assurance. "The same griev-ance had occurred at Duluth, but Minnesota legislation had driven the manipulators to Fort William," the Premier.

"Well, we'll put them back again or else-where?" he observed, amid applause.

Tariff Talk. Mr. Edward Anderson, representing the Lanigan Association, discussed the tariff. 'It seems a little out of place for me to talk tariff," said he, "for I am a free trader."

"So am I," commented the Premier amid renewed cheering. "The tariff was first invented by the evil one," Mr. Anderson volunteered. "It was class legislation. Man always advocated free trade for what he want ed to buy. 'The farmer's implements were his raw material, and this is an agricultural country. I know you agree with me," he addressed the Premier, "but we want a little more in that line than you've done during the last year. I am a Liberal, and want you to carry out the programme of 1893. You've done wonders, Sir Wilfrid. You made certain improvements even in this, but I sometimes think the Red Parlor has a little too much influence with some in the Liberal party. That's all. You won't be offended at plain speaking?" he concluded.

"Not at all." was Sir Wilfrid's smiling reply. "You are preaching not to a sinner, but to a convert." The Premier confessed his free trade ideals had not yet been attained, and gave the assurance of further revision by calling the representatives of the Grain Growers to the capital on his return in September, to discuss legislation asked for in relation to elevators and other matters.
