"I called here yesterday afternoon," said the captain, "and left my umbrella; will you let me have it?" "He was quite a gentleman to look at, ma'am," said Eliza; "but this sort mostly are. Tall, and broad-shouldered, and military looking, with blue eyes, very short, foir he had said the last word of his request; it suddently occurred to him that he might find it a little difficult to prove that the umbrella in question was indeed his own.

"As soon as Eliza," said Mrs. Brace-girle; "you can go."

As soon as Eliza had left the room Mrs.

"No, thank you," said the maid, "I've had enough of that at my last place. I'm not going to get into any trouble here. Better take to an honest trade, young man." With which piece of advice she shut the door in Capt. Fortescue's face, leaving the officer astonished, quenched and crestfallen. He went straight away and bencht a new umbrella. Armed with and crestfallen. He went straight away and boughts new umbrells. Armed with this, and admirably attired in other respects, he went to the botanical gardens, where he met Miss Bracegirdle, who seemed more beautiful, more charming and more beautiful, more charming and more gracious than ever.

As soon as seemed at all decent, he called again, feeling very contented with himself and his fate. But when he asked whether Mrs. Bracegirdle was at home, and the stern maid eyed him for a silent, and it instant his subrits fell strangely.

please, ma'am, that young man has been here again who came one day with the ambrella dodge. He asked if you were at home—of nourse he knew you were not—

At least three men on the average jury are bound to disagree with the rest just to show that they've got minds of their own; but there is no disagreement among the women as to the merits of Dr. Pierce's "That's right, Eliza," said Mrs. Bracegirdle. "Never give them a chance to get inside the hall. There's been too much of that stealing of coats and umbrellas in this meighborhood: it never would happen with a sensible housemaid. Master Harry leaves his things hanging in the hall so that it would be quite easy to carry off a coator umbrella if you left the man there alone only for a minute. If he is so impudent as enly for a minute. If he is so impudent as to corne again, the moment you see who it is stut the door." The next atternoon was Mrs. Brace-girdle's day "at home." Capt. Fortescue had not intended to go then; he wanted the loyely Miss Bracegirdle to himself, not surrounded by a crowd of admirers. But girdle's day "at home." Capt. Fortescue had not intended to go then; he wanted the lovely Miss Bracegirdle to himself, not surrounded by a crowd of admirers. But as he had not been able to see her the day before he determined to brave the crowd, and be content if he got one smile all his own. And so he presented himself once more at Mrs. Bracegirdle's door, this time knowing her to be within. But when it was opened and he confidently framed the phrase, not as a query but as an assertion, "Mrs. Bracegirdle at home?" and proposed immediately to enter, the maid said shortly, "No, she is not," and quickly shut the door upon him.

No words can describe his feelings. He started blankly at the handsome door, well shut and firm, that suddenly had closed upon him and separated him from his love. What could this awful thing mean? Had Mrs. Bracegirdle heard something—false, of course, and uttered by some other hase admirer of her daughter—

The scholars were taking advantage of it. Suddenly, in the midst of the racket, ightning struck the building, and the teacher, rousing himself, said sternly: "The boy who made that noise will have to stay after school."

Within the past ten years not a dol lar has been lost in purchasing lots in Toronto or its suburbs. On the contrary every dollar so invested has doubled itself in five years, some in three. West Toronto Junction is the rising suburb of the city and a few dollars invested in a lot the scholars were taking advantage of it.

thing—false, of course, and uttered by some other base admirer of her daughter which had made her take this cruel step?

The door was opened and the visitor instantly admitted.

The unhappy man who had been turned away from that same entrance sighed heavily, and went away down the sunny street, hanging his head. He told himself that it would be only a feel, or a madman, who could pretend to misunderstand so plain a refusal as this. Perhaps it was meant kindly, he thought; and greaned at the thought. Miss Brasegirdle was no equette, and did not care to have men offer her their love when she had no intention of accepting it. He was so desperately enaccepting it. He was so desperately en-amored of her that he busied himself in trying to see this eruel cut as a kind deed. His hopes were gone; but he could not bear so soon to lose his idol. He deterbear so soon to lose his idol. He determined he would not worry her by his unwelcome presence where she could not easily avoid him, nor permit himself to be langhed at by his successful rival. So he excused himself from certain engagements at houses where he knew he should meet her. He gave up dancing, and took upeards instead.

"Mamma." said Miss Bracegirdle, one "Do you believe these stories in the funny papers," she asked, "about the willingness of young ladies to be kissed!"

"I really can't say," he replied.

"They may be true, Then gathering courage, he added. "I hope they are true, and he drew closer to her.

"It seems to me," she said, "that there is only one way in which a young man can discover whether they are true or not."

"That will do, Eliza," said Mrs. Bracegirdle; "you can go."
As soon as Eliza had left the room Mrs. Bracegirdle sat down and wrote a note. Then she tore it up and wrote another, which was merely an informal invitation which was merely an informal invitation to lunch next day.

Then she called Harry down to her.

"Harry," she said, "I want you to go to Capt. Fortesque's rooms and take this note and the umbrella. See him if you possibly can, and try to explain about this unbapped unbrella, and that wratched unhappy umbrella and that wretched, stupid Eliza."
Then she told Master Harry the story,

Then she told Master Harry the story, at which he laughed immensely.

'Now, you must not laugh, but think how you can do the thing nicely, Harry. You can manage it admirably, if you choose. It is too absurd to put on paper. And make Capt. Fortescue promise to come to lunch, just to show he bears no realize."

which had made her take this cruel step?
It was impossible to knock against and ask; it was ridiculous to stand staring at the door. He turned, descended the steps, and walked down the street.

Before he had gone half way he met a hated rival, a very nice fellow, whom he had only begun to hate in the last three or four days, since he had noticed that Miss Bracegirdle semetimes gave him very charming and encouraging glances. Capt. Fortescue walked on slowly and listened for the confident rat-a-tat-tat of his rival. He heard it, lingered, and looked back. The door was opened and the visitor instantly admitted.
