The earlor of Dubin Sport has been on a visit to America, and he has written out his impressions. Here is a little extract referring to what he saw on the grounds of the Brooklyn Jockey Club:

We had some capital flat racing. The American Archer (as he was called). O'Loughlin was in good form, and I consider a nigger named dear in good form, and I consider a nigger named early made as well as the next lad. Every race is run as of which each peed and from the moment the flag goes down until the goal is reached, it is a case of making every post a winning post. One very strangs and amusing custom prevals that I must duly note. It is that of salloping at top speed with a great deal of heavy coutines on all the horses just previous to their races. Justine post well intered and blowing, and in the serving post well intered and blowing, and in the serving post well intered and blowing, and this as earling post well intered and blowing, and in the serving post well intered and blowing, and in the serving post well intered and blowing, and in the serving post well intered and blowing, and in the serving post well intered and blowing, and in the serving post well intered and blowing, and in the serving post well interest to let them content.

Joseph Martin, aged 22, alleged to have stolen the race horse Dick Brown from J. W. French's stable at Brigton Beach, was arrested at Brooklyn Wednesday night. He is a native of Prescott, Canada, and was very indignant when he discovered that he was accused of horse stealing. He showed a paper which proved that he and French' were equal owners of the racer. French alleged that Martin, after purchasing a half interest for $300, went to the stable, got possession of the animal and was about to run him off. In Justice Walsh's court Thursday morning the fact that Martin was a head to him: "You are discharged and ought never to have been arrested. Partners cannot rob each other; if there is anything wrong it simply becomes a matter for eivil action." Cols: Won. Lost. Percentage.
