"Jack-a-Manory" I'll tell you a story, ly mine is the truth, which is better, mance the equal, I ve got here the sequince the comes in a confident lotter, thum at the vollege was crammed full nowledge, a head like a civil reformer; t here, between us, he married a rlesque—a sort of barn stormer.

And though it was funny they captured money
And put on the scallops this summer;
vent on a ranch, while they at Long Branch Wore togaries to startle a drummer.
y "ranch" is a cottage, I grow my own pot-

God bless her and save her. Each Monday I gave her A sum I could spare for her dresses, But sharp as a razor, she goes right to Walker, And now at the last she confesses
First carpets and sofas she wrested from loafers Who once drank the most of my wages—
Then curtains and fixtures, and mirrors and nictures—

Till all came by slow, easy stages. Dick's temper so sunny has gone with h money

He spent all he made or could borrow;
I've written to say, he can some here and stay.
If he'll take my way out of his sorrow.
He wanted a rone, I'll give him new hope
Let his go as I did to the man
Who, whatever your station, wealth, health
situation,
Will help you as only he can.

Will help you as only he, can.

You see—Instalment—greatest boon on earth—only those who have spent life and fortune in other people's house know what it means to be promised at home; not only promised out given.—That spot where love seasons everything—Think how easy it is done—how cheaply, and don't put ut off longer. I could preach on this with poor Dick for a text, but will simply say, go at once to WALKER'S WEEKLY PAYMENT STORE, 1071—109 Queenstreet west. P.S.—Walker will be glad to furnish up your extra rooms for fair visitors—call and see him for particulars.
