Where Canada's Railway Policy Came

We have already endeavored to show how much the pressure upon Canada of English Free Trade opinion, along with the pressure of something besides mere opinion—has done to hinder and delay the establishment of Pro-tection in this country. When the Courfeder-ation bargain was being made, old Canada, but Ontario especially, was well pleased with the Buchanan tariff of 1858, somewhat amend-od be Sin Answarder Galt the year following. ed by Sir Alexander Galt the year following. But in the meantime English pressure had been heavily used to get us to adopt what was called "the liberal commercial policy of the Mother Country." Of course the men of Sheffeld and Manchester did not wish to see nanufactures grow up in Canada, not they. The opportunity of the Free Trade pro-paganda came when the Confederation bargain was under discussion. Then Nova Scotia and New Brunswick were under the witchery of Free Trade and "liberal commercial policy"-which means, liberal to all countries but your own. By the Nova Scotta and its will prove the fract and "ilberal to all countries but your own. By the way, just the same spell is over poor New-formdiand now, said it will probably keep her poor for some time to come, until ahe gets en-lightened enough to break loose from it. Well, between the prevalence of native Free Trade notions in the Maritime Provinces, and the pressure of opinion and something more than opinion from England, the representa-tives of Quebec and Outario were induced to consent to a lowering of the tariff which was doing so well for Old Canada. From 20 and 25 per cent, which afterwards proved a heavy blow and gress discouragement to manufactures. And for this serious check to 15 per cent, which afterwards proved a heavy blow and gress discouragement to manufactures. And for this serious check which was comenced as a Government work to use active seconda- after the sound to the was one years late when the schemed to having a Canadian railway acres the contin the over the letting in of foreign railways to would have remained National property, st it should. There would have "fixinge" to enable the National property, st it should. Then there would have been no try here was commended as a foretering would have be no laying down of "diamonds" or other "fixinge" to enable the National property. St it the ore the letting of foreign railways tor the operture to the lettinge an excord the two did been no laying down of "diamonds" or other "fixings" to enable the Northern Pacific Company to draw money from Canadian farmers. Never has the world witnessed anywhere, since first railways were known, a fairer or more opportunity than that which Canada had some years ago, of laying down in the Northwest a thoroughly National system of railways, established in the interest of the the Northwest a shoroughly National system of railways, established in the interest of the mation alone, and unfettered either by Pro-vincial rights or vested interests of individuals or companies. Up to what is still quite a re-the Nation bad still in its own hands what was all its own, and what it had better mever which would have made him e dangerous com-petitor in a lengthy contest, for he appears to given up. What a magnificent opportunity that was indeed! The world will not soon look upon its like again, we may be sure. Now, what was it that prevented Canada Now, what was it is not a province opportun-from realizing on this great solden opportun-ity, and as The World said the other day, led us into paths which we must now painfully re-trace, or do worse? We answer: the presure of Euglish opinion upou us during the last fifty veak or so. Nearly the whole English literature of political economy available for us was saturated with the doctrine that Govern-ment had uothing to do with railways except to charter the companies; after that all was to be left to open competition. In other words, free trade in railways was the only true sys-tem. It being a fundamental part of free trade. doctrine that "the best government is that which govern less," the railway com-tast as 8 mit to write from manuscript or short-able him to write from comparite operators of a faw advanced "thinkers," put into which may any a the ondended form for us the other day. These results—a very hard, practical kind of results they were too—had their origin in the speculative opin-form for us the other day. These results—a very hard, practical kind of results they were too—had their origin in the speculative opin-form for us she other day. These results—a very hard, practical kind of results they were too—had their origin in the speculative opin-ions of a faw advanced "thinkers," put into booksand magasines generation or two boftes. The was Sydney Smith and the Edinburgh Re-tow hard strate and the Edinburgh Re-tow in the magasines generation on two bodies. The was Sydney Smith and the Edinburgh Refrom realizing on this great golden opportunbooks and magazines a generation or two befors. It was Sydney Sansh and the Edinburgh Re-viewers who, in the days when George the Third was still king de jure if not de facto, prepared the way for the Great Reform Bill ef 1832. And Canada's railway policy in our own present time has been controlled by the docurnes taught in the scriptures of Jeremy Bentham, John Stuars Mill and Herbert Spencer. Spencer. In the world's whole list, ancient as well as modern included, there are only a few names wanced "thinkers," the last of whom is still living. Xet is has to be added that these great men went on the rocks, or their disciples did—whenever the attempt was made to apply absir teaching in connection with the growth of that terrible giant of modern times—the railway system. Bentham, who died a little over fifty years ago, knew nothing about rail-ways; while John Stuart Mill, much as he did over fifty years ago, knew nothing about rail-ways; while John Stuart Mill, much as he did know about many things, could scarcely have had more than a very faint conception of the problems which the rise of the Vanderbits and the Goulds have in our time forced upon the people of the United States for solution. As for Herbert Spencer, it is barely possible, though not very likely, that the world will at London, the plaintiff was awarded $2000 damhear from him any recantation of his well-known opinions on the non-interference of a half-a-pint of whisky on Tuesday last and government question: In Canada our railway policy has been such as might have been ductated by The London Times and The Westminster Review. Sir Joba Macdonald and Mr. Alexander Mackenzie have been at one on this that the province Railway had to be handed over to a company, and this was in harmony with public opinion of Canada. The latest experi-euce, both here and in the States, proves that as well. Kingston property owners want the council new evils have arisen, for which new remedies must be found. What these remedies will have to be is something for our public men to lots. have to be is something for our public men to take into their most serious consideration. Meantime we venture to say this much, that these remedies will certainly not be found in causing surflow spinal injuries. these remedies will certainly not be found in causing schots spins injuries. following out the free trade system, but in A man named S. This is shown more strongly by the greatly reduced movement and the stoppage of Omtario mills, which having an profitable work before them, prefer rather to lie faile for awhile that to lose money. This depression was primarily brought about by the high price of wheat, which caused bak-ers and consumers to run down to simost their has barrel, rather than buy at the proportion-ate advance. Heiders of four bave allowed a shaded price, still not enough to satisfy buyers who have set back and refuse to do anything Stocks are much larger in Ontario than gual, but demand almost nil.
