Niagara is being yoked and the mighty power which since the beginning of time has there been allowed to run to waste is to be utilized as man's obedient servant. We read of electric carriages, electric plows and other mechanical contrivances of which electricity is the motive power. And as yet the science is just in its infancy. While the last quarter of a century has witnessed much that excites our wonder and amazement in the way of mechanical and scientific inventions and discoveries, who can now imagine what the next few years will see?

Dr. Parkhurst and his class may preach as they will, and seek to hold the politicians responsible, but it is really the corrupt and purchasable vote which lies at the root of most of the objectionable features of modern political methods.
