

Extract from a Speech at Woodstock, N. Oxford, 3^d
March, 1889.

I claim that the policy we have pursued
is the policy of true liberalism, and is the policy best suited for promoting mutual confidence and goodwill among our people, and for advancing in the greatest practicable degree the common interests, without injustice to any

Occident