Mercantile Summary.

ROBERT WILKES, Esq., M. P., delivered a lecture before the students of the British American College in Toronto, on the evening of the 26th inst. which was listened to with interest by the young gentlemen and by a number of prominent citizens who were present. The lecture abounded with good practical advice. Special attention was directed to the manner and style of business correspondence, the lecturer humor-ously describing and criticizing different classes of letters—designating them as the abrupt, the obsequious, the obscure, the diffuse and the fraternal. The latter were to be looked upon with suspicion. The writers of these usually wanted some favor on the ground of religious or other associations to which they were not entitled. He recommended directness in letter-writing—that the writers meaning should be stated fully and freely but as briefly as possible.
Other topics relating to success in business pursuits were also remarked upon, the lecture occupying about an hour and a half.
