

River St. Croix at St. Stephen

with Fredericton. If the visitor's time is only sufficient for a cursory call at the Capital, he may spend a day there very pleasantly and return to St. John the same evening. By the river boat the journey occupies about six hours, but so brimming is this lovely route with picturesque delights that time and care alike take flight, and the stranger is taken by surprise when, like a vision of enchanted land, the stately elms of the "Celestial City" rise in view.
