

LET the Minister bring the Public Account fairly forward: Let him shew how he is to provide for the present Exigencies of the Public amply enough, so as not to endanger the Safety of the State, with some Surplus for future Emergencies, without which we cease to be a People: Let him make use of his great Majority to some great and decided, not speculative, public Advantage: Let him do more, and say less: Let him make those who went before him unpopular, not by Clamour and Assertion, and by calling Names, but by doing better: Let him do this—and He and I are Friends.
