

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER I.

THE ETHICS OF NAVAL DEVELOPMENT.

	PAGE.
Important Ocean Roads.—The Protection of Merchant Shipping on these Roads in a Maritime War.—Instruments of War part of the World's Evolutionary Machinery.—Why the British Naval Officer Regards Himself as the Watchman over the Interests of the Poor Jack of the Seas.—Neutral Ships and Private Property, other than Contraband, in War.—British Naval Expenditure.—The Morals of Military and Naval Service.—Three Prominent Features of Naval War Marked on the Century.—Moderating Influences due to France and England	1

CHAPTER II.

SLOWNESS OF DEVELOPMENT UP TO THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.

The Conservative Temper which Marked Naval Development for Ages until far into the Nineteenth Century.—Principal Features of the Shipping of the Successive Centuries from the Middle of the 13th Century Onwards.....	11
--	----

CHAPTER III.

THE SAILOR AND HIS HOME FROM A BRITISH POINT OF VIEW.

The Ship the Important Factor in the Making of the Seaman's Character.—The Foreign Element in the	vii
---	-----