PULLS GIRL OUT OF WATER, ANOTHER MAN IS THANKED AS HERO WHO SAVED HER!

That there is serious danger to life at the diving stand in front of the city bathing pavilion at Port Stanley has been demonstrated more than once. In fact several have been rescued already after great difficulty, and the need for ropes is urged upon those in charge.

The other day. Harold Tanton, Canadian Press operator at The Advertiser, saw a girl dive from the stand on the side where the water is fifteen feet deep. When she discovered it was fifteen feet deep she was struck with panic, and went down. Mr. Tanton immediately plunged into the water and with some George Flood, a contractor and teamster who lives at 630 York street, started some excitement this morning at the new sewage disposal farm on Price street, when, according to work-Price street, when, according to workmen at the plant, he appeared with a revolver and threatened to shoot up the whole place. Flood, it is claimed, fired two shots before he quieted down. It is said that one shot was fired in the air and the other at the ground. Flood's action was caused by the idea that he had not been fairly treated, his fellow workmen think.

For some time past Flood has been engaged in drawing gravel to the new sewage plant. On Thursday another team was taken on, but Flood's son, who helps his father, was told by Foreman Edward Pope that there would be work for his father today the same as usual. About 7 o'clock this morning the elder Flood came to work, but seeing the other team working, he went away again.
