The following is the official statement of the valuation of exports by the 114 steamships doing winter port business from this port, showing the total valuation to be $23,674,404, or within a few thousand dollars of the amount published exclusively in the Times and Telegraph on May 5th.

 Grand Total for 1906-7 $20,120,430
 Gain for 1907-8 $3,553,974

The past season was the banner season in the history of the winter port to date.

In the season of 1905-6, which was also a great wheat season, the value of exports amounted to $23,615,001, or $59,403 less than this season.

GIRL THIEF ADMITS SHE WAS DRUG FIEND

Additional Particulars Concerning Arrest of Elia Crowley for Theft.

The young woman giving her name as Elia Crowley, who was arrested yesterday on suspicion of stealing from the Elliott Hotel, Queen street, is said to be the daughter of a stewardess of one of the winter port steamers, and registered at the hotel last Friday under the name of Elia Elin, of Montreal. Only yesterday she made a statement, revealing her real name.

The case is said to present some unusual features. Since her arrest the young woman stated that she was addicted to drugs, and a case of hypochondria was found in her room at the hotel. She protests that she is entirely innocent of the charges against her. Besides the dress found in her possession, a nurse's uniform, belonging to Mrs. Arthur Armstrong, was found in the girl's valise, and Miss Julia Elliott reports that some old lace, valued at $50, is missing from her trunk and has not been recovered. The unfortunate girl, who was in court yesterday afternoon, was extremely nervous and was remanded to jail.

EARNST FRIEND OF THE CHILDREN

(Toronto News.)

Much has been done; much remains to be done. That is the keynote of the fifteenth report of the Provincial Superintendent of Neglected Children. Mr. Kelso believes that the greatest duty of the present and the future is more widely to extend the public knowledge of our child-labor laws, and of the remedial work which the children's aid societies are doing in the rescue of destitute children. "Many children now living in the midst of object of a vicious and a poisonous moral atmosphere might be materially helped if the society's operations were fully understood by those aware of the unfortunate condition of the children. The obligation rests upon all of us to employ every means at our disposal to bring neglected children into touch with a movement which will set their feet upon the road to a respectable career."

The Children's Aid movement aims to preserve the home life wherever possible, to that end strives to elevate home conditions. But it is frequently unable to remove children from their own parents and place them in foster homes, where all the advantages are helpful to the development of character. It is remarkable that the demand for such foster children is larger than the supply.

It is pointed out that many parents of the poorer class fail to train their offspring to regular occupations. The report refers to the fact that, but companionship, combine to render these young people of very little use to the community after life. The opinion is hazarded that the state will yet insist that every child on reaching a certain age above the school limit shall be apprenticed to some useful trade or business, so that he may be a contributing member of society and be able to pull his own weight.

The evil influence of the sensational theories on the morals of the rising generation is pointed out. It is found that many of our worst criminals frequented the same play when they were children. There they learned to regard crime as heroic and the habit of the attendance of boys under sixteen at the theatre often when accompanied by parents or guardians.

Mr. Kelso again calls attention to the fact that there is a lamentable lack of co-operation amongst charitable institutions and societies, which tends to extravagant and wasteful methods in general. It is sincerely to be hoped that the annual report of this body will be a happy consummation. In conclusion Mr. Kelso holds out the incentive of happiness to those who will lend their efforts to the reclamation of the unfortunate and the elevation of the socially degraded. There is no joy so abounding as that which crowns the unselfish and philanthropic life.

THE ROYAL BANK

The Royal Bank of Canada has issued its last annual report in handsome booklet form, containing a list of number of their branch offices throughout the Dominion. The cover contains a striking embossed representation of its handsome new building in this city. In addition to the annual report there is a list of the bank's shareholders, followed by several pages of up-to-date financial and Canada statistics, which will be of much value to business men generally. The booklet concludes with the Dominion Customs tariff, which will be found useful to those desiring to consult it. It is a handsome production and reflects credit upon its authors.

INOPPORTUNE

Gentle spring had come. The young grass was growing by the roadside along which they strolled. Love fired the youth's breast.

"Ah, Adelaide," he cried suddenly, "I love you! I place my happiness in your hands!"

"No, no! Not now!" she begged. "And why not now?"

"Because I need both hands to manage my skirts."

It was, indeed, true, for the road was muddy, as roads usually are in spring.
