DIES WHILE ON VACATION

John Doherty of Melrose, Mass. Succumbs to Pneumonia at Upper Loch Lomond

Many people in this city will regret to hear of the death of John Doherty of Melrose, Mass., which occurred yesterday morning at Upper Loch Lomond. Mr. Doherty came down from the states a little more than a week ago to spend a two weeks' vacation at Loch Lomond. For some days he was not very well but his condition did not cause alarm until Friday last. Then it was found he had pneumonia. He is survived by his wife, who was with him at the time of his death, two daughters—Anna, who was also with him, and a son who had just returned home a few days ago after spending the summer at Upper Loch Lomond, two other daughters and two sons.

Mr. Doherty's brother William arrived on the Boston express last night to take the body back to Melrose. It was brought in from Loch Lomond this morning and is now at P. Fitzpatrick's undertaking parlors in Waterloo street.
Mr. Doherty was a man of genial disposition and made many friends during his summer vacations at Loch Lomond. He was superintendent in a large brass works in Boston and was about fifty-five years of age. His daughter, Miss Laura, was taken ill on receipt of the news of her father's death and was not able to come to St. John with her uncle. The family will have the sympathy of many people here in their bereavement.

FOUR LIQUOR CASES

Gallagher, James F. McGuire, W. B. Daley and J. J. Connors were before Judge Ritchie in the police court this morning, charged with having sold liquor to Albert Daigle, a minor, on Saturday last. Daigle was arrested on Saturday last by Sergt. Baxter and Policeman Wittman in Water street. He was remanded and enquiries were made as to where he got the liquor. Information was consequently laid as stated.

With the exception of J. J. Connors all pleaded not guilty and Daigle went on the stand and testified that he had visited each of the places mentioned and had secured a glass of ale and porter in each one and that after taking the fourth glass he did not know anything until he woke up in the Water street lock-up. He was positive as to the stores that he visited and identified Daigle as having been the one that served him in the latter's store. The defendants said that they had never seen the witness before. The case was adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon when Daigle's mother was to be called to testify as to his age.

THE LATE BRADFORD WILLIAMS

Bloomfield Station, N. B., Sept. 7.—The funeral of Bradford C. Williams took place this afternoon and was attended by many. After a short session at the house, the body was taken into the Episcopal church and then interred in the Presbyterian burying ground at Central Norton.
Mr. Williams, who was seventy years old, was a son of the late Gilbert Williams, of Cambridge Queens county, N. B. In 1864 he went to Nevada where he was a successful gold mining expert. Later on he carried on a mercantile business in Grafton, New Mexico. On account of ill health he returned to New Brunswick about 1880.
In 1884 he was married in Carson City to Miss Laura Willmot. He is survived by his wife, two sons—Iva at home, and Roy, assistant agent of the C. P. R., at Nokomis, Sask., also two daughters, Misses Letta and Pearl, of this place, and one sister, Mrs. H. C. Frost, of St. John, West End.

SURPRISED AT OPPOSITION TO MINISTER

Former Resident, Now in West, Wonders at Course of Some

DIFFERENT OUT THERE

Announcement of Such Works as Hon. Mr. Pugsley is giving St. John Would Cause Big Boom—Greatest Thing Ever Offered This City

Fred H. Hale, formerly well known politician and member of parliament for Carleton county in this province, and who is now located in Vancouver, is authority for the statement that there are close upon 12,000 New Brunswickers in the province of British Columbia alone. Everyone in the up-building of their western home land and not a few of them have attained positions of prominence through their efforts to secure for British Columbia public works necessary to the success of the province.

Writing to a relative in this city recently, a former New Brunswicker resident in Vancouver, expresses much surprise that St. John City has seen fit to give battle to the Minister of Public Works whose localities residing in the western provinces. Continuing, the writer said that out west the people looked upon the development of the country in public works as of such importance that political issues, community jealousies and rivalries are entirely forgotten, all citizens joining heart and hand in securing for their respective localities federal and provincial monies for permanent up-building.

During July the Canadian Northern Railway Company announced their intention to build a road through the west within the next three years, a large graving dock and terminal facilities. This news caused sensation in real estate values and was seized upon by the 100,000 citizens of that city as a great step forward in the development of the port. Each similar announcement of the building of public utilities intensifies the buoyant spirit of the people, the doubter, pessimist, and hide-bound party man is looked down upon as a drone and of no good whatever to his community.

The whole province of British Columbia is at present building great hopes upon the effect of the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific line in that province, which is expected before the fall of 1913. Despite the vast wilderness of the interior of the province and its inaccessibility at present, except by primitive steamboat and porcupine trails, numerous town sites have been mapped out and are being sold, and the hope expressed by the people for the eventual development of the province.

Calgary and Medicine Hat are indulging in the most strenuous rivalry at the present time for the securing of the C. P. R. car works and real estate in each town is competing by leaps and bounds. Lettbridge, McLeod, Nelson, Fernie and other localities are also competing, one with the other for federal and provincial expenditures. Even newly created townships along the Grand Trunk Pacific, Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern are being boosted because of their locations as railway centres, junction points and distributing towns.

The ex-New Brunswicker in writing home seemed amazed at any opposition in St. John in light of the prospects as a transfer terminal for trans-oceanic trade, and says if Vancouver were in its position, the most pronounced sort of optimism and co-operation would obtain at the present time. As if offering an explanation to his own question, the writer continues—

"I wish I were a millionaire, and if I were, it would give me the greatest pleasure of my life to bring a half a dozen trainloads of St. John's young men and old men, too—with a fair sprinkling of mothers, daughters and wives—to the west country. If by the time they had reached Fort William they had not seen their home city in its true light; and by the time they had visited Winnipeg, then reached the coast, they were not convinced that the projected government works in dear old St. John were the greatest boon the place has ever enjoyed, I would lose faith once and all time in the ability of my home people to know a good thing when they see it."

The moral is plain.
