[DAILY EDITION]

HALIFAX, N. S., MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 7, 1913.

THE CANADA FOOD COMPANY,

HE Canada Food Company, Limited, incorporated under the Nova Scotia Joint Stock Companies' Act, with headquarters at Halifax, has been organized for the purpose of acquiring and operating the wholesale grocery business of MORRISON'S LIMITED, Amherst, and MORRISON & WILLIAMS, Halifax, and the establishment of stores in the undermentioned towns, arrangements having been completed for the taking over of some of the most progressive retail businesses in the province. There will be three stores in Halifax, one in Darimouth, and one store each in the towns of Windsor, Kentville, Canning, Brügetown, Digby, (Wolfville, Stellarton, Yarmouth, Liverpool, Truro, Westville, New Glasgow, Antigonish, Sydney, North Sydney, Ananapolis.

The company will from time to time add to and operate stores in other growing centres of the province, and will erect a modern warehouse in Halifax, where also a small up-to-date cold storage and refrigerating plant will be installed. The establishment of stores throughout the province will enable the produce of the farmers to be sold direct to the consumer, with the advantage of passing through but one channel. The Company's business will be on a cash basis, eliminating bad debts. It will be co-operative, thus affording opportunities to the investor and the customer.

CAPITALIZATION

The preferred shares rank, both as to capital and dividend, in priority to the common stock.

Management

The directors, all of whom are known to the public as successful and The directors, all of whom are known to the public as successful and capable business men, have been particularly fortunate in securing the services of two expenienced men for the WHOLESALE and RETAIL departments, in Mr. D. A. Morrison, now operating wholesale stores in Hallfax, Truro, Amherst and St. John, and Mr. A. S. Burgess, who for eight years has been conducting business in Canning, operating and managing The Trading Company. Both Mr. Morrison and Mr. Burgess, who are well-known business men, are admirably qualified to make a success of the enterprise.

Estimated Earnings

It is conservatively estimated that in its wholesale and retail departments, the company will earn a net profit equal to 17 per cent. on the issued preferred stock which is participating as well as cumulative, and is preferred both as to principal and dividend.

Subscriptions

Applications for the shares, accompanied by the first installment, may be addressed to WM. H. WETHERBY & CO., investment brokers, Halifax, N. S., or to any branch of the BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA. Subscriptions are payable as follows:-$10.00 per share on Application.

Eastern Car Company's Rapid Construction.

Such rapid progress has been made in the construction of the Eastern Car Company's blg plant at Trenton that the management are now prepared to undertake contracts for steel underframe railway cars, delivery to commence in July of this year. way cars, denve. July of this year.

The Company is now occupying its new offices. Erection of the power-house is finished—boilers and power cquipment are being installed—power will be supplied at the end of this month. The steel framework of the main building is completed, and the cranes are all in position buy unloading the heavy machinery arriving daily.

February first saw the appointment of the new general manager, Mr. H. B. Douglas, formerly manager of the Standard Steel Car Company of Hammond Indians, and he is now on the ground getting his organization together. With his wide experience in other car building works in the United States, Mr. Douglas should rapidly place the plant on a producing basis.

"Most prisons have wide gatesi chilcote laughed again napleasantly. "That was six years ago. I had started n the mornhia track four years earlies out up to my father's death I had it u n the realization of my new responsipilities and the excitement of the nolitical fight I almost put it aside. For months after I entered parlianent I worked. I believe I made one speech that marked me as a coming man." He laughed derisively. "I even married"—

"Married?"
"Yes—a girl of nineteen, the ward of a great politician. It was a brilliant marriage, politically as well as socially, but it didn't work. I was born without the capacity for love. First the social life palled on me, then my work grew irksome. There was only one factor to make life endurable-morphia. Before six months were out I had fully admitted that." But your wife?" "Oh, my wife knew nothing-knows nothing. It is the political business, the beastly routine of the political life, that is wearing me out." He stopped nervously, then hurried on again. "I tell you it's hard to see the same faces, to sit in the same seat day in, day out, knowing all the time that you must hold yourself in hand, must keep your grip on the reins"—

"It is always possible to apply for the Chiltern Hundreds." "To retire? Possible to retire?"
Chilcote broke into a loud, sarcastic laugh. "You don't know what the local pressure of a place like Wark stands for. Twenty times I have been within an ace of chucking the whole thing. Once last year I wrote privately to Vale, one of our big men there, and hinted that my health was bad. Two hours after he had read my letter he was in my study. Had I been in Greenland the result would have been the same. No; resignation is a meaningless word to a man like me."

Loder looked down. "I see," he said slowly: "I see." "Then you see everything—the dif-iculty, the isolation of the position. Five years ago—three—even two years ago—I was able to endure it. Now it gets more unbestable with every month. The day is bound to come when—when"—he paused, hesitating nervously—"when it will be physically impossible for me to be at my post."

Impossible for me to be at my post."

Loder remained silent.
"Physically impossible," Chilcote repeated excitedly. "Until lately I was able to calculate—to count upon myself to some extent—but yesterday I received a shock—yesterday I discovered that that"—again he hesitated painfully—"that I have passed the stage when one may calculate."

The situation was growing more em-barrassing. To hide its awkwardness, Loder moved back to the grate and rebuilt the fire, which had fallen low. Chilcote, still excited by his unusual chemence, followed him, taking up a sition by the mantelpiece.
"Well?" he said, looking down.

"Well?" he said, looking down.
Very slowly Loder rose from his task. "Well?" he reterated.
"Have you nothing to say?"
"Nothing, except that your story is unique and that I suppose I am fattered by your confidence." His voice was intentionally brusque.
Chilcote paid no attention to the voice. Taking a step forward he laid his fingers on the lapel of Leder's coat.
"I have passed the stage where I can count upon myself," he said, "and I

Loder drew back involuntarily, con-

It was suggested to me unconsciously by the story of a book—a book in which men changed identifies. I saw nothing in it at the time, but this morning, as I lay in bed, sick with yesterday's fasco, it came back to me. It rushed over my mind in an inspiration. It will save me and make you. I'm not insulting you, though you'd like to think so."

Without remark Loder freed himself from the other's touch and walked back to his deak. His anger, his pride, and, against his will, his excitement were all aroused.

He sat down, leaned his elbow on the Again Chilcote caught his arm.

"You misunderstand," he said. "You mistake the position. I tell you my wife and I are nothing to each other. white and I are nothing to each other. She goes her way! I go mine. We have our own friends, our own rooms. Marriage, actual mairiage, doesn't eater the question. We meet occasionally at meals and at other people's houses; sometimes we go out together for the sake of appearances; beyond nouses; sometimes we go out together for the sake of appearances; beyond that, nothing. If you take up my life nobody in it will trouble you less than live I can promise that." He laughed unsteadily, Loder's face remained unmoved. "Even granting that," he said, "the thing is still impossible."

"Why?"
"There is the house. The position there would be untenable. A man is known there as he is known in his own club." He drew away from Chilcote's touch. "Very possibly. Very possibly."
Chilcote laughed quickly and excitedly.
"But what club is without its eccentric member? I am glad you spoke of that. I am glad you raised that point. It was a long time ago that I hit upon a reputation for moods as a shield for-for other things; and the more useful it has become the more I have let it grow. I tell you you might go down to the house temorrow and spend the whole day without speaking to, even nodding to, a single man, and as long as you were I to outward appearances no one would raise an eyebrow. For an instant Loder was at a loss to find a reply sufficiently final. Chil-cote broke in upon the pause. "After all," he urged, "what I ask of surd!" he said. "Absurd! Such a scheme was never carried through."

"Precisely why it will succeed. People never suspect until they have a precedent. Wills you consider it? At least consider it. Remembers, if there is a risk it is I who am running it. On you is a simple thing—merely to carry through my routine duties for a week or two occasionally when I find my wance giving away, when a respitabecomes essential."
