

How German People Are Fooled by Authorities

Facts About War Deliberately Distorted and Successes Exaggerated — Strong on Multiplication.

New attempts by the Germans to keep up the waning spirit of the people of the Teutonic countries by deliberate distortions and misrepresentations of facts are being daily exposed.

Mr. Asquith stated in the House of Commons on the 9th inst. that the total casualties in all ranks of the French and Mediterranean Expeditionary forces up to May 31 were 258,069. He gave details showing how many officers and how many men "of other ranks" had been killed, were wounded, and were missing up to that date. In its evening edition of the following day, namely, the 10th inst., the Tagliche Rundschau, of Berlin, published a telegram from its special correspondent at The Hague in which it was stated that "Asquith has announced in Parliament that the total of the English losses in France is 1,585,409, of whom 10,955 are officers."

The Tagliche Rundschau, which is read chiefly in army and naval circles, printed this "news" in prominent type and rendered it still more conspicuous by placing over it the heading "A Million and a Half English Losses." In the first place, the German public is informed that the losses were sustained in France, whereas Mr. Asquith stated clearly that these were the casualties "in the French and Mediterranean Expeditionary Forces." In the second place, the Berlin newspaper adds 1,227,340 to the number of the casualties in other ranks mentioned by Mr. Asquith. It gives correctly the number of men missing, namely 52,477, but it increases to a fabulous degree the number of killed and wounded. This is, of course, one of the expedients adopted by the German authorities to keep up the spirits of the German public, and to convince the people that Germany is gaining the most brilliant victories on all sides. The public will believe this statement, as it has believed all the statements issued by the authorities in which the repeated capture of hundreds of thousands of Russian soldiers and of untold numbers of guns has been announced.

It has been trained to have no opinion of its own in military matters, and to accept blindly every statement made by the military authorities. Even if the truth is otherwise, it could be told in Germany, the authorities there would merely declare that the foreign statement was a lie. The German authorities have admitted once that this method is employed in respect of Russia. About a month ago, when the German armies achieved their first important successes in Galicia, the reports that circulated throughout Germany were so extravagant that an authoritative statement was made in the matter. It transpired that the number of Russian prisoners taken had been multiplied in some cases by ten, in others, and even in Berlin, by 20. The authorities acknowledged that practically the same report of prisoners taken had been received from both the German and the Austrian headquarters, and that the two totals had been added together before the report was issued to the newspapers. This admission and the ignorant distortion of the British Premier's official statement referred to above justify the suspicion that the number also of Russian prisoners claimed to be captured by General Mackensen's army is greatly exaggerated for the benefit of the German public. Furthermore the German military authorities must feel quite confident that German newspaper readers will not think for themselves, otherwise they would fear that the millions of "wounded" and "lost" and "captured" little army could lose a million and a half of its men and yet be strong enough to serve as an invincible obstacle in the way of the advance of the invincible German warriors of Calais.
