GREAT BALL LOOKED FOR ON TUESDAY

New York, Oct. 4.—The closing of the major league baseball season in the east tomorrow will find the two championship teams in the peak of physical condition for the world's series, with the exception of two minor injuries, which have placed some of the Boston enthusiasts on the anxious seat.

Fear that Captain Doyle, of the New York Giants, might not be able to play at his best because of his ankle which was slightly spiked yesterday, is groundless. Doyle played through out the game today in his usual form. All the other men in the Giants' camp are ready for the fray.

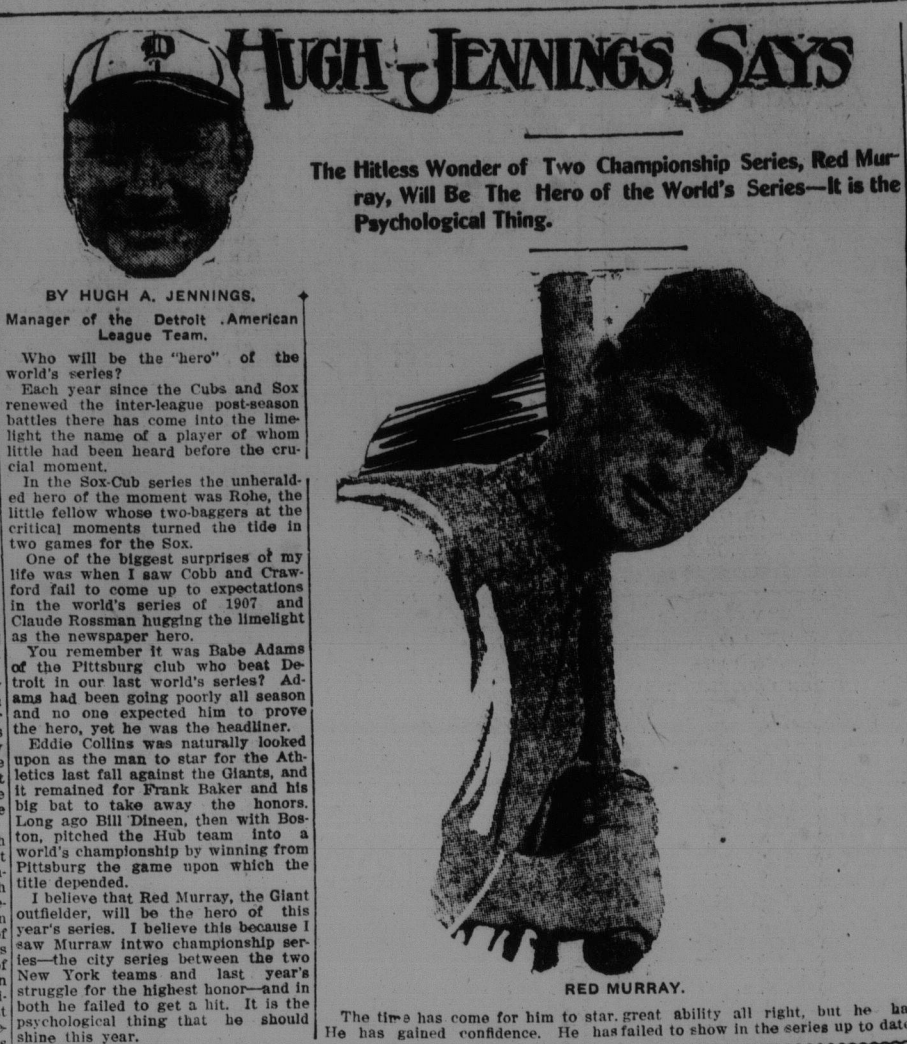

The possibility of Gardner or Carrigan, of Boston, being kept out of the early games of the world's series has had a slight effect in betting odds here, evening up the wagers where Boston had been a slight favorite, but New York enthusiasts expect to see both men in the opening game, though, perhaps, not at their best, if the injuries to their hands are not wholly mended.

With the trial of Marquard today probably all of the first division pitchers of the Giants have had their workout before the world's series opens at the Polo grounds on Tuesday. Mathewson, the old mainstay of the Giants box, has had the longest rest of any, for he has not been in a game since a week ago yesterday when the pennant was clinched.

McCray was highly pleased with Marquard's showing today against Brooklyn. He pitched five strong innings, holding Brooklyn with two scattered hits. The subsequent loss of the game came when Wilkes and Ames, two of the roller pitchers, were put in and eight runs scored off them. The last game of the Giants' season at old Washington Park, Brooklyn, tomorrow will incidentally mark the passing of that place as a scene of big league baseball games. The Brooklyn club opens next year on Ebbetts field, where a large modern stadium is being built.

NEWARK CLUB CHANGES HANDS

New York, Oct. 4.—President C. H. Ebbetts of the Brooklyn National League Baseball Club and E. J. McKeever today formally announced the purchase of a controlling interest in the Newark club by the International League from Joe McGinnity. As part of the transaction McGinnity, who had under contract as manager and player, received his unconditional release.

HUGH JENNINGS SAYS

The Hitless Wonder of Two Championship Series, Red Murray, Will Be The Hero of the World's Series—It is the Psychological Thing.

BY HUGH A. JENNINGS, Manager of the Detroit American League Team.

Who will be the "hero" of the world's series? Each year since the Cubs and Sox renewed the inter-league post-season battles there has come into the limelight the name of a player of whom little had been heard before the crucial moment.

In the Sox-Cub series the unheralded hero of the moment was Rube Adams, who had been going poorly all season and no one expected him to prove the hero, yet he was the headliner.

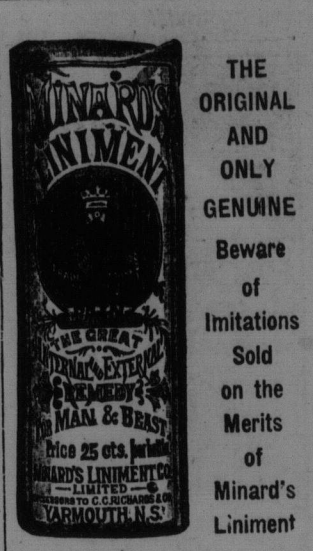

One of the biggest surprises of my life was when I saw Cobb and Crawford fail to come up to expectations in the world's series of 1907 and Claude Rossman hugging the limelight as the newspaper hero.

You remember it was Babe Adams of the Pittsburgh club who beat Detroit in our last world's series? Adams had been going poorly all season and no one expected him to prove the hero, yet he was the headliner.

Eddie Collins was naturally looked upon as the man to star for the Athletics last fall against the Giants, and it remained for Frank Baker and his big bat to lead the Athletics to the title.

I believe that Red Murray, the Giant outfielder, will be the hero of this year's series. I believe this because I saw Murray into championship series—the city series between the New York teams and last year's struggle for the highest honor—and in both he failed to get a hit. It is the psychological thing that he should shine this year.

The time has come for him to star, great ability all right, but he has not gained confidence. He has failed to show in the series up to date.

A COMPANY-FAIRVILLE GAME TODAY

The football season will be opened in the city this afternoon when the A Company fifteen will clash with the Fairville team. This will be the first occasion for several years that a Fairville team has been in the field, and as the rivalry is exceptionally keen, a fast game may be expected. As to the Fairville pigskin chasers little is known beyond the fact that they have a strong team, composed of a few exceptions, of the men who played in the city league of several years ago. At that time they were a body of athletes to be reckoned with, and as they have been practicing hard of late they are undoubtedly in good condition.

The A Company team is also a fairly strong fifteen, composed of players who have either been well known at their colleges or who have been following the game for the past two or three years. The team this afternoon will probably be picked from the following players—Dr. Don Malcolm, Anglin, Jennings, Howard, Melrose, Brooks, Stubbs, LeLacheur, March, Morrissey, Gilbert, Philip Stams, H. Simms, McKee, Climo, Golding, Wetmore and Megarty.

Sandy Thorpe will probably referee. Play will commence at three-fifteen sharp.

Boston Girl's Letter

Boston, Sept. 28.—Bostonians are watching with interest the preparation of the exterior illumination in connection with the forthcoming electrical exposition at the Mechanics Building. Their interest has grown steadily from an indolent observation that "they're getting ready for the show" to an avid and absorbed attention which causes craning of necks from passing street cars on the daily trip to business. The finished effect will unquestionably be something the like of which Boston never before has been able to boast. Every line of the building is accented by white or colored bulbs, and the minute architectural details are carried out in designs of colored lights. Great pillars of solid light are ready to indicate the entrance and, within, the masonry is nowadays wondering in hushed whispers how many bulbs there are altogether on the exterior of the building. The Great White Way concentrated in one city block might give an idea of the prospective brilliance. Visitors to the show had better bring their blue goggles.

With the opening of the football season comes the cheering news from Harvard that the long discussed Stadium bridge is to be erected in the near future. New Englanders who join the football crowds will have to creep once more slowly and timidly across the ancient draw which threatens each year to dump its burden into the waters of the Charles. The next time that Yale plays at Harvard, however, it is to be hoped that the Crimson and Blue banners may be carried gaily over an artistic and substantial concrete structure which shall serve as a suitable approach to the Stadium. To Larry Anderson who has made the bridge possible many thousands of football enthusiasts will render a rousing cheer.

Valuable additions to the Hub's Museum of Fine Arts have recently been made, according to the report of M. Guilfray, curator of the department of paintings, who has been touring European galleries and art sales in search of treasures. The four new acquisitions are of widely differing schools and fill important places in the museum in illustrating the works of the famous painters. Gainsborough's "Portrait of John Eld, Esq.," complements the landscape works by this artist; a cassone, or wedding chest, illustrating the story of Psyche, painted by Phillippo Lippi is a sumptuous example of Italian panel work. Jan Matsys' "Judith, of the date 1545, the most important painting now existing among this artist's works is the first 16th century Flemish painting to be acquired by the museum. Lastly is "Le Parnasse" by the celebrated Claude Lorraine. These treasures will add considerably to the visitor's interest in the museum's already famous department of paintings.

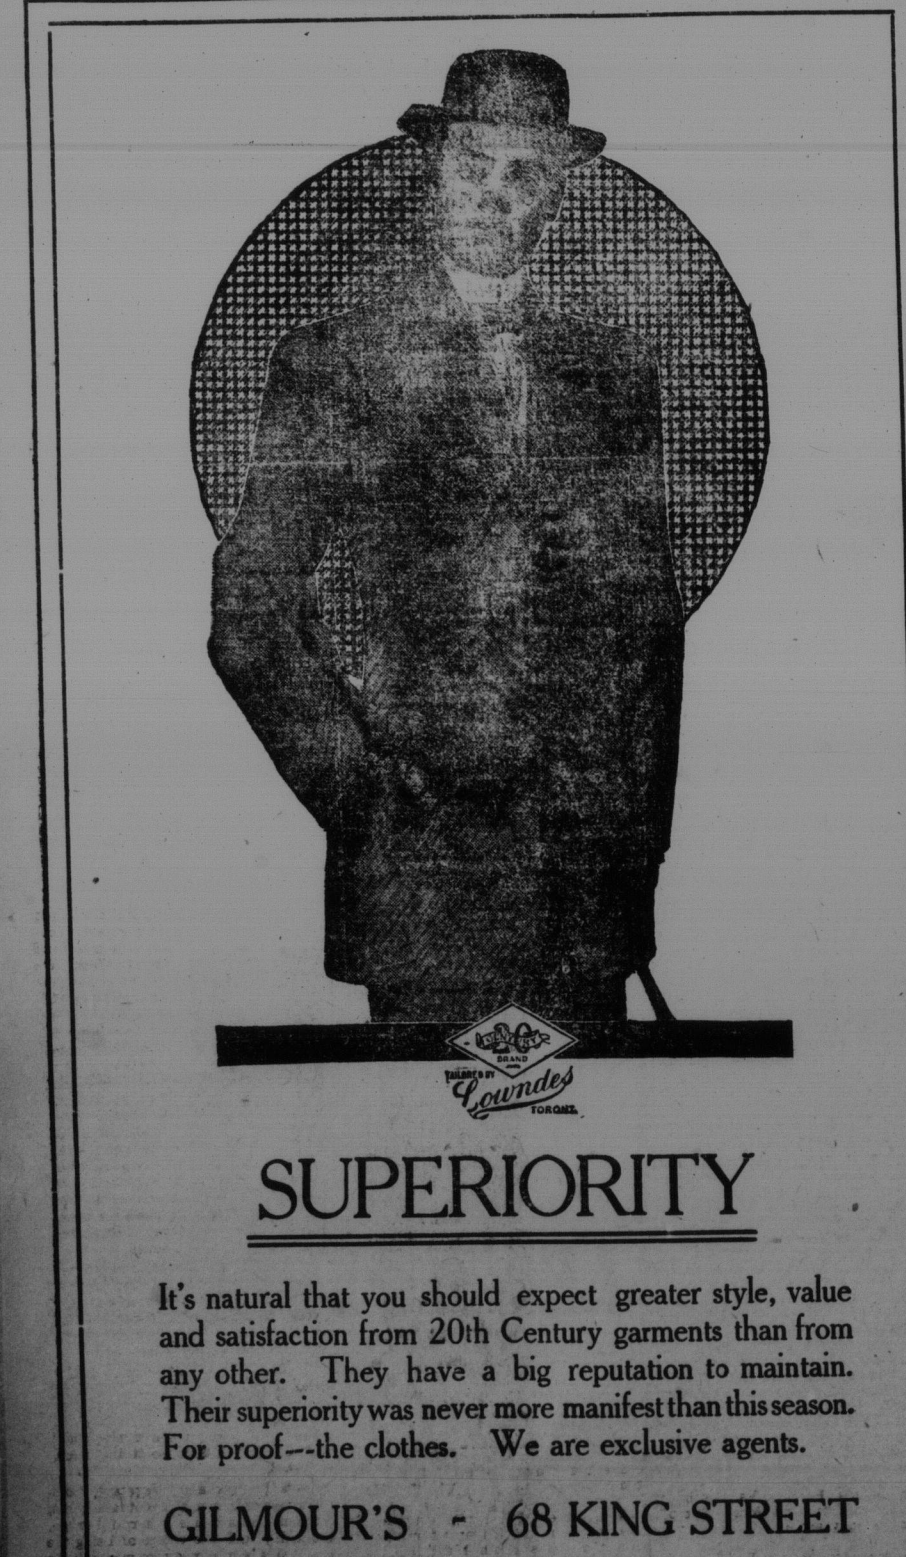

The success of Boston's Music School Settlement was demonstrated at the opening of the school term, when over 150 pupils, the majority under 14 years of age, settled down to work. Several little North End musical aspirants received their scholarships for the past year's work. These scholarships mean much to such children as the little fatherless nine year old girl whose future livelihood may result from such encouragement. One of the scholarships was awarded to a ten year old girl who has already composed several violin pieces. A number of ambitious youngsters were made happy by receiving scholarships which provided partially or wholly for their year's tuition. The instruction is given by a number of Boston's best musicians, and frequent cases of unusual talent are found among these little settlement children which would otherwise be doomed by poverty to oblivion.
