Some time ago a man and a woman came to live in Sydney from some part of the States. They passed themselves off as being married and were so taken for granted that they were given a room in a saloon on the Esplanade for their honeymoon. The man and woman suddenly left town, taking only a few of their belongings. The landlady, a little old woman, was left in the house she then kept on Ferry street. She did not notice the landlady, it is said, that she was going away. On the same day there disappeared from town a married man who has left behind him a wife and two or three children. This man and woman have been together quite recently and the woman thought he has eloped with her—Sydney Post, 17th.
