On the sixth evening the billows quicted, and the weak wretches rept down and rumaged for food. They found a case of preserved meat, some wine, lime juice and beer, and it "helped them to live." In spite of this and a little more which they afterwards extracted from the soaked cabins, they had still a dreadful time to pass. There was no shelter and nothing to be had to support life but an odd tin or two of provisions; and first the boy died, then the boatswain and afterwards a sailor. Finally a Spanish was asked.
