The Bride of Llewellyn

"Is it not so? Well, no matter, you will tell me what it is," said the doctor good humoredly.
"It is Powis. I am Lieutenant Arthur Powis, of the frigate Neptune, stationed at the Navy Yard."
"Just so. Well, we will soon get you up again, ready for duty."
"Doctor," said the sick man, "I am very anxious to be taken home. Can I be removed today?"
"Why, no, not with safety to your- self."
"How soon, then, do you think?"
"Oh, in the course of a few days, or a week."
"Not before?"
"Scarcely, you must be patient, you know."
"I will endeavor to be. But, as I must stay here so long, I wish my wife sent for at once."
"Ah!—then you have a wife?" said the doctor, in some little surprise; for he had believed the man to be quite alone in the world.
"Ah, yes, I have a wife. And I fear she is suffering the utmost anxiety. Last night was the first night I ever passed away from her," said the sick man with a deep sigh.
"Last night—was the first night— you ever passed away from her?" repeated the doctor, with a puzzled look.
"But Sister caught his eye and shook her head at him, as much as to say, 'You must remember that he is not in his right senses yet.'"
"Yes, doctor, the very first and only one. And she is but a young creature. I wish some discreet messenger sent to her, who will not alarm her, but will gently break to her the news of my injury. Let the messenger take a letter and bring her back in it. I will pay for it, of course, as well as for any trouble I have caused," said the sick man.

The doctor more puzzled than before, looked up into the face of the young man for an explanation of this remark. But the sister only shook her head at him, and the doctor was not very quick in interpreting pantomime.
"I will give you the address of my wife, if you will be so good as to take it down: Mrs. Arthur Powis, at Miss Cran's, Green Cottage, Capitol Hill, Capitol Hill. Where is that?" slowly inquired the perplexed physician.
"Now it is possible you do not know where Capitol Hill is? I thought there was not a creature in this city that didn't know that! The messenger will, at least."
Again the doctor looked up at the sister for an explanation. And as the sick man turned his face to the wall, she whispered:
"Doctor, he thinks that he is in Washington City. He is talking of the Capitol Hill there."
"Oh, I see, certainly! I know where the Capitol Hill is! And so your wife is there?" said the doctor, cheerfully addressing the patient.
"Yes, will you please take the address down and send the messenger?"
"Certainly," said the doctor, taking out a blank card and a pencil from his pocket, and making a pretense of writing.
"You will send it at once, I hope?" said the man, impatiently.
"Oh, of course!" replied the physician, heartily, as he returned the card to his pocket. Then he drew out another slip of paper, wrote a prescription, and put it in the hands of the sister, saying:
"Give him one of these powders every two hours until I see him again. Keep the ice to his head and hot bricks to his feet." And he passed on to his other patients.

The sick man followed the doctor with his eyes until he had left the room, and then turning those sad eyes on the sister, he inquired:
"Do you really think he will remember to send for my wife at once?"
"He will do the best he can, no doubt," replied the nurse.
The man sighed deeply and turned his face to the wall, and seemed to be in a fall into perplexing thoughts.
The sister gave him his medicine, and then left him in charge of another nurse, while she retired to take her so much-needed rest.

The man lay quietly for about an hour. And then he said:
"If the doctor kept his promise, it is high time for my wife to be here."
"Did the doctor promise to send for your wife?" inquired Sister Paula, the second nurse.
"Yes he did."
"Then make yourself easy. He will do it," said the sister, who really knew nothing of the matter.

The man was quiet for a little time; but to make himself easy for another hour seemed impossible. With the impatience of illness, he harassed his nurse all that day with inquiries of whether his wife had really been sent for. Toward evening, however, he yielded to the influence of the composing powders that had been regularly administered to him through the day, and he fell into a deep sleep that lasted all night.
Early the next morning, before he awoke, Sister Domitia resumed her watch beside him. He found her there when he opened his eyes.
"Sister, has my wife come?" was his first inquiry, given in the most anxious tone.
"Not yet," she gently answered.
"Oh, why is that? What has happened?" he demanded.
"Nothing; really nothing, that we know of. The doctor will be here presently; and I hope he will be able to give you some satisfaction," said the sister, in a soothing voice.
And in fact at that moment the doctor entered the ward.

The poor man watched him with eagerness as he passed slowly up the long line of little beds, stopping at every one that was occupied. He could scarcely restrain his impatience until the doctor came up to his own bedside.
"Well, Simmons, how do you find yourself this morning?" he cordially inquired.
The man stared and frowned, and then answered:

Grip, influenza

Hamlin's Wizard Oil a Reliable, Antiseptic Preventive

During influenza epidemics spray the nose and throat several times a day with one part Wizard Oil and two parts water, using an atomizer. If you haven't an atomizer, gargle the throat and snuff the mixture up the nose. This treatment sets up an antiseptic wall of defense against "flu" germs.
Chest colds and sore throat lead to grip. Stop them at once with Wizard Oil before they can develop into dangerous influenza.
Get it from druggists for 30c. If not satisfied, return the bottle and get your money back.
Ever constipated or have sick headache? Just try Wizard Liver Whips, pleasant little pink pills, 30c at druggists. Guaranteed.

On Good Teeth depend Health and Beauty

MENNEN'S CREAM DENTIFRICE does more than clean your teeth.
It keeps your teeth bright and strong—and is also most beneficial to the gums and mouth cavities.
In the morning—and after every meal—use—
MENNEN'S CREAM DENTIFRICE

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.
You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night. Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head, soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.
It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.

No Pay for Night Talk

An order has been made at Osgoode Hall, Toronto on the application of David Robertson K. C., of Walkerton, acting for George McCallum of Brant township, quashing part of a by-law passed by the County Council of the county of Bruce.

It appears that the Municipal Act permits county councils to pass by-laws allowing their members a sum not exceeding $5 per day for attending sessions of the county council, but the county council of the county of Bruce undertook to provide that where its sittings were prolonged beyond 10 o'clock in the evening that such extra sittings count as an extra day and the members paid accordingly.
This provision was objected to as illegal and beyond the power of the county council. Its illegality was admitted by the solicitor for the county and an order was made by Mr. Justice Kelly at Osgoode Hall, quashing that part of the bylaw with costs to be paid by the county to the applicant.
