Dr. G. R. Lomer,
Montreal, Can.

Dear Sir:

That the third edition of Cunliffe and Lomer's WRITING OF TODAY which came from the press last May, comes up to the standard set by the preceeding editions and has the same appeal to college Freshman Composition teachers is evidenced by its wide adoption. In less than five months it has been adopted by such universities and colleges as:-

University of Chicago	Johns Hopkins University	Randolph-Macon College
Columbia University	Antioch College	State Coll. for Women
University of Pennsylvania	Grove City College	Columbus, Miss.
University of Richmond	Hamilton College	Wesleyan University
College of William and Mary	Temple University	Connecticut
University of Kansas	Trinity College (Conn.)	University of Delaware
University of Maine	Howard University	Penn. College for Women
Wellesley College	Lehigh University	Skidmore College
Ohio State University	Sophie Newcomb College	University of Wooster
Purdue University	Utah Agricultural College	University of Buffalo
State University of Iowa	Northwestern College	State Coll. for Teachers
University of Colorado	McGill University (Can.)	Albany, N. Y.
Wesleyan University (Ill.)	Queen's University (Can.)	Lynchburg College
University of Nebraska	Southern College (Fla.)	Colo. Agricultural Coll.
Kansas Agricultural College	West Va. Wesleyan College	Swarthmore College

Interesting reviews of the book have appeared in several periodicals and newspapers, and among them is one which we believe teachers of English would enjoy reading. We are therefore enclosing a reprint of this particular article just as it appeared in the "Christian Science Monitor" of July 15, 1922.

If you are interested in WRITING OF TODAY, with a view to adoption, we shall be glad to supply you with an examination copy. The list price is $2.00.

Very truly yours, P
