FRUIT TRANSPORTATION

Professor Robertson, Dominion commissioner of agriculture and dairying and Hon. Mr. Fisher, have returned from England, where they had a conference with steamship owners and importers, with a view of obtaining better shipping facilities for our fruit and other perishable produce.

"One of the main objects of our visit was to meet owners and agents of steamship lines to arrange for improved accommodation for the carrying of cheese and apples especially, that is for mechanical refrigerators and the circulation of cool air.

I found the steamship owners, with one exception, very favorably disposed to meet the wishes of the agricultural department in this matter. The need of our commerce is safe rather than quick carriage, that is, transportation without deterioration of the products carried.
