Interesting Letter from New York. Its

General Features.

All who are interested in the prosperity of their native town and its institutions must hail with pleasure the success of the publishing industry of Athens. Your lively paper is one of the best proofs that Athens can hold up, to demonstrate that she is wide-awake and bound to develop in every branch of art and literature. Long have her educational institutions which a lustre over Eastern Ontario. Within these two branches must be generated the steam that shall utilize her natural resources. Her unlimher natural resources. Her unlimited building capacity, her natural resources, her resorts, her energetic citizens, her well managed institutions, the present of the common-wealth. the purity of her surroundings, and the deep religious spirit which actuates so many of her children, are all living germs which must, in the very nature of things develop into a battle. of things, develop into a healthy and flourishing corporation. But, as the growing child requires great care, so each citizen should be ever on the alert to guard her growing interest.

I will be happy to have your favorcach citizen should be ever on the alert to guard her growing interests, that in every department a full, natural development may result. Deep and wide has the foundation been laid for the future Athens, and we, her off. spring either by birth or adoption, even at a distance look with pride upon her continued progress. You will pardon, I hope, Mr. Editor, this long preamble; the feelings which actuated it arose spontaneously, and patriotism is almost too strong an emotion to curb.
