DR. PITCHER'S BACK-ACHE KI NEY TABLETS.

Formula of Zina Pitcher, M. D. Late Professor of Materia Medica and Genito Urinary Diseases, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

The quickest and surest relief for backache kidney troubles, and can show more evidence to that effect than all other advertised remedies combined.
Dr. Pitcher admits he cannot formulate a remedy that is good for all human ills, but states his reputation on these tablets for backache and kidney troubles and will not allow them to be advertised as a "jack of all trades" medicine.
Mrs. Prineau, Thomas St., Chatham, says: "Some six months ago I began to have a good deal of backache due to kidney trouble. I can lay it to nothing in particular, as it came on so gradually. I tried other remedies, but the bottle of Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets I got at A. I. McCall & Co.'s drug store, did the work. They certainly acted finely, gently and rapidly and I can recommend them heartily as thoroughly reliable. They certainly handle both kidneys and bowels well."

If you have the slightest symptom of kidney or bladder trouble you can test this great medicine free. Arrangements have been made whereby every reader of this paper can obtain a trial package of Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets absolutely free by enclosing two cent stamp for postage to The Pitcher Tablet Co., Toronto, Ont. When giving address mention this paper.
If you are convinced Pitcher's Tablets are what you want, you can obtain regular size bottles for 50c per bottle. If not obtainable at druggists, mailed free of postage on receipt of price.

When a boy turns his bulging pocket inside out we marvel at the quantity and variety of articles he has stored away. Odd lengths of string, marbles, a horse-chestnut, a top, brass nails, hickory-nuts, an apple, and many more articles are gathered up and stored up of unconsidered trifles. We think the collection must be hard on a boy's pocket. And it is. But do we ever think of the variety and miscellany of the substances we put into the pocket of our stomach? There's the apple and the nuts, and things besides quite as indigestible as the apple and the nuts. And yet we wonder that the stomach "gives out." When the stomach breaks down, the result is a head-ache, skin eruptions and other symptoms of a diseased stomach are quickly cured. Whenever the use of a laxative medicine is indicated, use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They act in harmony with the "Discovery" and assure its action by purging the bowels of food accumulations.

MARTHA MILLS'S LUCK.

A law recently enacted by the New Jersey Legislature providing for the abolishment of the tollgates has resulted in the tearing down of an old landmark in the suburbs of Trenton known as the Mills Tavern. This tavern was kept for more than a half century by Martha Mills, a woman who made a small fortune out of the pennies she saved from her commission on the tolls that she collected at the gate that she opened and shut without missing a day for fifty years.

To these savings she added thousands of dollars made in her dealings with politicians who came to her hostelry to lay traps and connive for the passage of measures by the Legislature and for political appointments in which they were interested. She possessed a remarkably keen eye for business and her prices for favors were cash money. She was at such a pitch that they yielded her a liberal profit.

She was a tall, muscular woman, with an attractive face. She might have married many times during her younger days, but she frankly declared she loved money better than anything else on earth, and that she wouldn't trust a man as far as she could throw a stone church by the steeple.

Among her other accomplishments Martha was an expert poker player, and coupled with her knowledge of the game and her careful estimate of the value of a hand was a "streak of good luck" that stayed with her from one end of the game to the other. She rarely got up from the table loser, and she would never take a hand unless there were seven players.

She explained this peculiarity by saying that she was the seventh daughter of a seventh daughter and had an abiding faith in the number seven. Her confidence in this number always prompted her to draw cards to it no matter what odds were against her. If there was a seven spot in Martha's hand she would draw to it, and when she did the pot generally went over to her side of the table.

Away back in the forties and fifties there were some pretty sharp poker players among the members of the New Jersey Legislature and the politicians who hovered around the lobby. They played a "no limit" game, and when they felt like making a night of it without being disturbed they went to the Mills Tavern and sat down to the game in what was known as the "Chamber of Fate," a big room in a remote part of the house. Here, with a jug of applejack on the floor, the players sweated and fumed and rejoiced or wept and wailed over their hands.

One rainy night six of the "stiffest" poker players who had the entrance to the "Chamber of Fate" came together in a room of Martha's tavern, and a turn at poker was suggested and Martha was invited to take a hand.

"Gentlemen," she said, "I'll play if you say so, but I feel unusually lucky, and I think it will be better if you leave me out."

Every one of the others declared that he felt lucky and insisted that Martha should take a hand in it. They adjourned to the upstairs room and began what was probably the shortest big game ever played.

"Now," said one of the players before the cards were dealt, "let's find out which one of us has the least money, then we'll make him put it up. We'll match his pile and then play table stakes."

The proposition met with the approval of the other players. The man who had the smallest roll was George Stinson, an Essex county man. He had three hundred dollars. He spread the money on the table, and the next minute there were twenty-one hundred dollars displayed on the board.

Henry Whitehead, a South Jersey Assemblyman, dealt the cards. The pot was opened by Miles Graham, who started the ball rolling with a bet of twenty dollars. "What do you say?" asked Whitehead, looking at the other players.

"Will you do it, Martha?" asked Honeywell.

"You never knew me to back out of a game of poker, gentlemen," quietly answered Martha.

The deal went around to Martha before the pot was opened. Honeywell opened it with a bet of $10; Heatwood raised it $20, and Martha stayed with three kisses, valued at $30.

Heatwood, who had opened the pot with a pair of jacks and who had been playing in hard luck, ever since the game started, slammed his hand down on the table with an exclamation of disgust and refused to see the rise. The other four players had thrown up their hands, and the contest lay between Heatwood and Martha.

"Well, Martha," said Heatwood, when he had recovered his breath, "you're a cool one and no mistake. You make a four card draw and then try to bluff a pat hand. There are thirteen kisses coming to me if I call you, but I guess we can both stand more than that, so I'll raise you fifty dollars."

Heatwood threw his chips on the pile in the middle of the table and, chuckling merrily, lay back in his chair.

"I'll see that and raise you five more kisses," calmly said Martha. "That's twenty-three kisses I owe you if your hand beats mine, but my advice to you is to stay out."

"Oh, no," said Heatwood, "not with this hand. I'd rather kiss you a hundred and twenty-three times than twenty-three, so I'll raise you a hundred dollars."

"I've given you a good chance to save your money, and you don't seem to want to do it; now, if you kiss me you've got to pay for it. I'll see your raise and bet you twenty more kisses that I've got the winning hand."

The prospect of fifty-three kisses made Heatwood smack his lips, but he had been up against Martha's luck before; besides, his $200 to call, and he had that amount lacking $10. He shoved $100 into the pot and said, "I'll call you, Martha. I'm $10 shy."

"I don't play shy pots," said Martha; put up the money if you want to see my cards."

Honeywell threw a ten dollar bill into the pot for Heatwood, who said to Martha, "Now what have you got—anything?"

"I'm the seventh daughter of the seventh daughter," replied Martha, as she slowly spread her cards on the table. "I held a seven spot and drew three more. There they are."

Heatwood laid down an ace full on five, and, referring to his luck in language more forcible than refined, left the room, with his five friends tagging along behind and occasionally inquiring if Martha's kisses were above the average in point of price and sweetness.

The biggest winning that Martha ever made was a fifteen hundred dollar note, and a seven spot did not trick. It was in the winter of 1868. The Legislature was in session and bills that they wanted passed, as a consequence the lobbyists and members of the Assembly had "money to burn." The sessions in the "Chamber of Fate" that winter were frequent and unusually exciting. There was not much chance for Martha to get into a game, but the "kitty" was a fat one every night, and she was satisfied with her income from that source.

One rainy night six of the "stiffest" poker players who had the entrance to the "Chamber of Fate" came together in a room of Martha's tavern, and a turn at poker was suggested and Martha was invited to take a hand.

"Gentlemen," she said, "I'll play if you say so, but I feel unusually lucky, and I think it will be better if you leave me out."

Every one of the others declared that he felt lucky and insisted that Martha should take a hand in it. They adjourned to the upstairs room and began what was probably the shortest big game ever played.

"Now," said one of the players before the cards were dealt, "let's find out which one of us has the least money, then we'll make him put it up. We'll match his pile and then play table stakes."

The proposition met with the approval of the other players. The man who had the smallest roll was George Stinson, an Essex county man. He had three hundred dollars. He spread the money on the table, and the next minute there were twenty-one hundred dollars displayed on the board.

Henry Whitehead, a South Jersey Assemblyman, dealt the cards. The pot was opened by Miles Graham, who started the ball rolling with a bet of twenty dollars. "What do you say?" asked Whitehead, looking at the other players.

A PIONEER'S STORY

AN INTERESTING INTERVIEW WITH MR. B. L. MASTIN.

After Long Years of Perfect Health he was Attacked With Kidney Trouble and Other Complications—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Bring him New Health.

From the Pictou, Ont., Times.
Mr. B. L. Mastin, of Hollowell township, Prince Edward county, was a valiant at the Times office the other day and during his visit told of his great suffering from kidney trouble and any rheumatism, accompanied by dyspepsia-cold feet and a generally broken-down constitution. Mr. Mastin is one of the first settlers of Prince Edward Co. He is in his seventy-first year and is the father of a grown up family of well-to-do farmers. In the course of the conversation Mr. Mastin said—"I had never known what it was to be sick. I have always had good health and worked on my farm every day until some months ago, when I was taken with severe pains in my back and shoulders. I consulted a doctor but received little benefit. I was told by one doctor that I had rheumatism and kidney disease, but his treatment did not help me and I continued getting worse my appetite failed me and I fell away in flesh. I became irritable and could not sleep well at night. Nobody can conceive the intense pain I endured. Not deriving any benefit from the food I ate and having a constant pain in my stomach I soon became aware that I had dyspepsia, and the pain in my back and shoulders intensified by the stonelike weight in my stomach, made life to me almost unbearable. I was also a great sufferer from cold feet, nearly every day my feet would get like chunks of ice, and unless I was constantly by the fire the soles of my feet would feel as though they were wet. One day I told my wife I was going to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Having read so much of these famous pills, I thought that what they had done for others they might do for me. I procured a box from Mr. E. W. Osse, druggist, and to my great delight before I had used quite one box I had improved. When I had finished a couple more boxes I felt like a new man and I gladly tell this for the benefit of a why sufferer as I did." Continuing Mr. Mastin said: "My rheumatism is all gone and I can come and go and enjoy good health as well as I ever did. With these remarks Mr. Mastin got up to go, but added that his wife was receiving much benefit from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. "I took home a couple of boxes of the pills," he said, "and I think they are splendid."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the system, thus driving disease from the system. Avoid imitations by insisting that every box you purchase is enclosed in a wrapper bearing the full trade mark, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. If your dealer does not keep them they will be sent postpaid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.
